After a very poor meal which Tubbs scraped up the 'wo sat down and smoked. Tubbs' tongue gradually loos-ened under the influence of many more drinks, and before 10 o'clock brought up a waning moon Drake knew a great deal that made him uncomfortable. He resolved to shift the burden to Wilker-son's shoulders as quickly as possible.

The next morning did not bring cheer. His head ached from the fumes of Bill Tubbs' whisky, and the chill of the mountain air was not dissipated by a cold breakfast. And before the sun had risen above the peak of the moun-tain the miners had approached him with questions.

something immediately. He called some of the leaders into the office and with apparent frankness told them he had known nothing of the situation and that he felt sure Wilkerson was unaware of it.

"What are you going to do?" came the demand. "This," replied Drake, writing rap-idly. He showed them the message: Harry Wilkerson, Los Angeles, Cal.: Come to mine at once. Trouble is brew-one of them coldly.

"It will. Now who will take it and send it?"

Two men volunteered to take old Tom Kane's burros and make the trip.
"And while you're in Silent Valley," Drake said, yielding to a sudden inspiration, "take this $20 and get some grub for the camp."

"There's still some locked up in the ook house," said another. "It's old cook house," said another. Tom Kane's lookout, so we didn't exactly feel like taking it."

go," he sald. Tubbs looked suddenly serious. guess you better leave that to me," he said in a low voice. "I know where it will do the most good." .He winked şlyly.

Meantime John Dorr, Everett and Tom Kane were spending long hours n discussing what was to be done to save the "Master Key" to Ruth. Tom once more went over the exact situation at the mine and asserted that unless prompt measures were taken not would there be actual distress. but likely rioting.

"You know some of the worst ones hang with Wilkerson," he said grimly, "and they might at any time take it into their heads to do a little dynamiting. Dynamiting is mighty dangerous stuff around several thousand dollars' worth of machinery, and if blew up the workings there wouldn't be any mine left, you see." "I see." said Everett at last. having the papers, I can't put this deal

Dorr flushed. "I didn't mean it that way. It seems as if I kind of messed things up myself, and I-I thought I might get 'em set right by myself."

"You called on me, and I'm the doc tor," said Everett authoritatively. He pulled out his wallet and commenced counting out bills. "I came prepared for this, for I thought there might be an emergency."

"But who will take charge of it?
Who will go to the mine?"

The broker laughed at him. "Not you. You'd be in a fight in three minutes, specially if Wilkerson turned up. Tom Kane is our man." He turned on the old man abruptly. "Will you take this money and go?"

The old cook stared at the crisp bills and then at Dorr. "I ain't handled paper worth that much lately," he re-marked. "But if you want me to go in there and feed them people and get 'em back to work and keep things going till John can fix things up here I'll

On his way to the mine Harry Wilkerson's courage, newly fired by a last conversation with Jean Darnell, commenced to ebb.

Drake and Tubbs received him with unaffected relief. A few words sufficed to make the status of affairs plain. Tubbs looked at his superior with strained anxiety in his bleared eyes. Dull and sodden with liquor as he was, he understood perfectly that everything depended on the next few days. The engineer had lived in min life, and he knew the passions engen dered by the arid mountains and the remorseless desert. What would Wil kerson do? Was he strong enough to handle these men who were ready for anything, even to bloodshed if aroused Wilkerson had lost his sense of fear oddly enough. As he had come into nized him and scowled. He had felt their hatred, and it fed fat the man's sinister passion to do harm, to hurt, to destroy. Now he faced Drake and Tubbs arrogantly.

"It won't be long till these chaps find out who's the boss," he said. With a significant look at Drake he pulled out the forged deeds and hand ed them to Tubbs.
"Those mean that I'm iegally th owner of the 'Master Key' mine." he Tubbs seemed thoughtful, glancing out of the window now and again. Drake voiced his feeling.

"The sooner you let the miners know and get things settled the better."
Wilkerson licked his dry lips. The battle was on. He broke the silence by saying gruffly. "Call 'em up here,

Nothing loath, Tubbs went out on the porch, and his hoarse tones resounded through the little valley. Instantly men appeared from doorways, came from a dozen places in response to that call. And women, clutching their children, peered out to see what was in the air.

When the men were gathered before him Wilkerson stepped forward and commenced to speak. He could not break their sulien silence, and, after a few words of generalities, he mustered his courage and shouted: "I am the

The engineer peered at them dully, He haltingly mumbled over some of the legal phrases at the beginning, saw the names Thomas Gallon and Harry Wilkerson prominently displayed. He was impressed. He did not understand the purport of the papers. He did understand that Wilkerson was smilling with the insolence of triumph achieved. He grinned slowly and passed the papers back.

"I guess that'll fix 'em!" he said buskily.

"I guess it will." was the rejoinder. Tubbs seemed thoughtful, glancing.
