THE STRONGEST MEN'S WEAKNESS
The International Sunday School Lesson for January 31 is "The Birth of Samson."—The Bible of Samson. (By William T. Ellis.)
Judg. 13: 8-16, 24, 25

A frank look at the weakness of the strongest man, Samson, is to-day's Sunday school lesson.

Back in the unsettled times of Israel, more than a thousand years before the birth of Jesus, before ever the people had a king, and the leadership was with judges or champions, or heroes, Samson was born.

Like so many other notable characters, he was the child of yearning and prayerful covenant. His parents had been long childless when they received with joy the promise of a son. In a spirit of grateful exaltation, they dedicated the babe to a life apart, and made for him the Nazirite vows, which later were taken for John the Baptist. His head should be unshaven, he should drink no wine and touch naught unclean. "And the Nazirite, and Jehovah began to move him."

There was a great beginning. Inheritance, natural gifts, spiritual endowment—all were the lot of this young Nazirite. The most favored youth of his day was Samson. All the elements of greatness were his. He had been made ready for great service to his time. Thus far his case runs parallel to that of a host of favored young men of to-day, richly dowered in body, mind, fortune and home. To them, as to Samson, the nation looks for leadership and deliverance. Some of the alas, fall in quite the same fashion as he.

The Man Who Missed His Chance
Every mature person has marvelled at the young men of womanly promise who have not amounted to anything. Every college has its stories to tell of graduates sent forth with high hopes, who have never met expectations. They are the Samsons, dowered with giant capacities, which they fail to use aright.

All who follow baseball recall the death last year of a meteoric pitcher who could not get a way to his work. He preferred to be a barroom hero, a "wonder" on a small team, to doing his day's work on the famous nine of which he was for a time a member. Swiftly he slipped down and down, until death ended the tale of what might have been. It was the Samson story over again.

Samson's strength was not only physical. He had qualities of leadership—enterprise, daring, resourcefulness and self-reliance. His pranks reveal this. But these gifts were not used in sober, mature and responsible fashion for the benefit of his people. Samson preferred a mad personal exploit to a substantial achievement of citizenship. He had not that sense of responsibility which marks the real leader.

There, Smiling Up at the Graceful Stranger, Ned Warner Saw His Vanished Bride.
"The New York Express overtook a local and slowly forged ahead, and Ned, peering feverishly into every passing window, saw the suave, black Vandyked stranger bending gracefully over his just wed, newly lost wife."

ATTRACTIVE OPENING BILL
"A Grain of Dust" is announced as the opening bill of the Arthur Chatterton company at the Majestic, Monday night. "Kindling" will be given Monday afternoon. The night offering is of special significance. Arthur Chatterton is specially fitted for the leading role, while his leading lady, Adelyn Bushnell, answers every requirement as a stenographer. These are the actors that make a special appeal to an audience. The play will be elaborately staged throughout.

ORPHEUM
A rattling duo of song and comedy entertainers is Mack and Orth, who, with their hedge-podge of nonsense and mirth are proving one of the big hits on the popular array of Keith hits at the Orpheum this week.

Howe's Travel Festival, Mack and Orth, it doesn't seem to be their material. For the boys are so decidedly clever and so original, they will receive what they do, say or sing, always seems to please.

Mack and Orth offer one of the fine Keith hits that are supporting Una Clayton and company in their excellent comedy of the same title. Also on the same bill Bokonghi's Midget Rider is scoring the comedy hit of the season. The must-see attraction is the Trans-Atlantic Trio, of banjoists and vocalists. The Orpheum's current bill is varied, well balanced and clever throughout.—Advertisement.

The Moving Pictures Will Be Shown at the Victoria Theater Every Monday, Commencing Monday, February 1, and at the Royal Theater Every Monday, Commencing Monday, February 8

COLONIAL
Distinctly Oriental is the term that must be applied to Sumika and the Japanese girl song and dance attraction that a number of dainty misses from the Far East are presenting at the Colonial for the last half of the week. Elaborate stage settings and costumes make the act a beautiful spectacle in itself.

McCORMACK SEAT DEMAND LARGE
The McCormack concert on Wednesday evening next at the Chestnut Street Auditorium will start promptly at 8:15 in order to allow time for the encores which the public always demand, and Mr. McCormack's generous grant, thereby allowing delegations from out of the city to catch the train and the first day's sale yesterday was phenomenal, and those who delay in securing their reservations are liable to be disappointed. In order that the out-of-town patrons will receive the same consideration as those in Harrisburg, and which is justly due them, a section of reserved seats at $1.50 and $2.00 have been set aside and which will be held open until Monday evening next and orders accompanied by cash or check sent to W. H. Siger, 150 North Second street, Harrisburg, will receive the same attention as those who call in person.—Advertisement.

Samson and Richard The Lion-Hearted
Later history developed a brilliant figure singularly akin to Samson. This was King Richard the Lion-Hearted, of England. Both gloried in deeds of danger and derring-do. Neither seemed ever entirely to grow up. A whirling hurricane impelled them to wild escapades of adventure, when they should instead have been soberly serving the welfare of their people. Neither was bad, and there was nobility in both, but they failed to use their gifts aright. No substantial achievement remained as a memorial to either. Picturesque and heroic figures they were, but no one can write them down as successful.

The presence of enemies never afflicted blithe Samson. He dwelt amid the Philistines, the powerful folk from the West who so long oppressed Israel. In his day the enemy's yoke was heavy on the people's neck. It was an hour for a hero, a deliverer; and Samson was sent to be that hero. He never used for his own sport gifts that were meant for service. Instead of organizing and leading the Jews against the tyrants, he provoked them to fight by his own exploits. Until his closing hour did Samson soberly serve his nation.

That is the condemnation that must be written over against his name as a day of reckoning. He was a man who lives for himself alone in a time when his country needs him—he failed to give his best to his time. Probably if Samson were in England to-day he would be either a professional football player or an aviator, no place in the trenches for him.

REGENT THEATER
Another successful two-day presentation of exclusive film plays has terminated and the management of the Regent Theater is more than ever convinced that film plays are the city are thoroughly in harmony with the efforts of this theater to exhibit films of highest grade only. The character of the preceding exhibitions is further emphasized in the presentation of the new drama, "The Girl in the Sash," with Alice Brady in the title role, giving as it does full scope to dramatic and musical talents of this well known and justly esteemed actress.—Advertisement.

The Bible's Practical Joker
Samson is best known for his practical jokes. He is the only man in the Bible. In his way to court with a Philistine wife he slew a lion with his bare hands. Later, as he passed by, he saw the carcass filled with honey. At the wedding feast he wagered thirty garments with the guests that they could not guess his riddle:

"Out of the eater came forth food,
And out of the strong came forth sweetness."

His bride teased Samson into telling her the answer, which she told to her countrymen, that they might not have to pay the wager. Samson thereby lost the bet and the wife, but he went out and slew thirty Philistines, and paid the bet with their raiment.

Later, Samson sought a reconciliation with his heathen wife, only to find that his father-in-law had given her to another. Our immature hero could not strive to avenge only by individual wrongs; he had not the imagination to visualize a whole people's suffering. An affront to himself put him into action. He was like the rich woman who thought of the poor's need of coal only when her own fire went out. So this affront led Samson to gather (doubtless with the help of companions) three hundred jackals, which he would tie to tails. A firebrand was attached to each pair of conjoined tails, and the animals were set loose amid the ripe grain fields of the Philistines—an exploit which led the latter to burn the faithless wife and father-in-law.

Whimsically, this weather-vane fellow thereupon undertook vengeance for the murder of his wife and her father, and slew a host of Philistines. The latter harried Judah in force, and Samson, in their midst by a ruse, slew a thousand of them with the jawbone of an ass. In personal prowess the strongest man was not lacking. Later, besieged at Gaza (the city that is girding in the day's war dispatches), he carried away the gates of the city on his shoulders, and dropped them on a mountain. A giant's prank, that.
