Annville, Pa., Jan. 38.—Probably no town for its size can boast of ten lifedong residents whose ages aggregate more than do those ten residents of Hamlin, a small town southwest of Annville. Each member of this group is hale and hearty, not one being a victim of suffering. The oldest of the group is Isaac Rittle, aged 86 years, and the youngest George Lentz, who is 66. Their ages average 73 years.—H. H. Harkins, an Annville grocer, has arranged to start a milk route.—Protessor H. H. Shenk delivered a lecture before the members of the Y. M. C. A. of Reading on Sunday afternoon.—Paul Bachman left on Tuesday for Pittsburgh.—John Kendig, who has been suffering with a disabled foot for some time, found it necessary to go to the Lebanon Hospital to have an operation performed.

A sore throat is a good breeding place or Diphtheria germs. Protect your children by never neglecting a Sore Throat. You can wisely depend upon TONSILINE. Give Tonsiline upon the first appearance of sore Throat—don't give Diphtheria a hance in that throat in its weakened condition. When TONSILINE is swallowed it omes directly in contact with the diseased unface and induces a healthy condition of the membranes—then the system can better defend the throat if attacked by Diphtheria germs. Aunt Este's Stories For Children

My dear little ones:

How do you like your friends of Kitchentown by this time?

Kitchentown is just like all other towns, so of course, once and awhile the folk who live there have quarrels, although I hate to think about it—don't you? If you're not too much shocked over it, read the story of

think about it—don't you? If you're not too much shocked over it, read the story of THE NEXT DOOR NEIGHBORS
Once upon a time in Wall street, in Kitchentown, lived Mrs. Gas Stove and Mrs. Cook Stove, side by side. Now you surely would have thought that they would be very good friends—for not only did they live with only a narrow alleyway between them—but they really were related! They had both sprung from the old family of Stoves. They both prided themselves on what good ancestors they had; on how much good they had done in the world; on how they had helped man to live; on how they had made man happy—and yet with air this Mrs. Gas Stove and Mrs. Cook Stove couldn't agree. Oh, it was surely sad to think about:
Soul; the was been considered they would be surely sad to think about were good enough for my father and grandfather—they are good enough for me. She was the kind who believed on always having her house kept warm—in fact, she believed in all old-fashioned ways. But Mrs. Gas Stove was different—she had sort of gotten new-fangled ideas about things. She couldn't stand for coal or wood; she never kept her fire burning any longer than it was needed; in fact, she liked to go out after every meal. Mrs. Cook Stove called her a Gadfly—or as her favorite child, Coal Shovel, used to say in fun "Gasfly."

"Why she no sooner gets through cooking a meal, than out she goes!" said Mrs. Cook Stove. "I think it's dreadful! Now I am different: I'm a good housewife, and stay at home all the time. I never go out, unless it is someone else's fault—sometimes they make me go out."

"How about summer time?" asked Mrs. Teakettle. "It seems to me you are never hother then."

"Well, I have a right to a vacation, I guess." sniffed Mrs. Cook Stove.

And so just over a silly thing like that Mrs. Gas Stove and Mrs. Cook Stove got to disliking each other, and would have nothing to do with one another. (Come to think of it, it is always a silly thing which makes two neighbors fuss and quarrel. Who ever heard of, anybody quarreling over anything worth while losing a night's sleep over?)

It was Mrs. Teakettle who acted as peacemaker. She really liked both, Mrs. Gas Stove and Mrs. Cook Stove. So she was very glad when, one day, she had a chance to try to make them good friends.

It was a bitter cold day. Mrs. Cook Stove had been asked to heat a good hot kettle of water—and Mrs. Teakettle was helping her out all she could. The lady who wanted it was in a great rush—and poor Mrs. Cook Stove tried all she could to hurry, but as she said: "What can a poor soul who burns coal or wood do word nurry—not is wrong?" So try as she would she simply code of the country—not is wrong?" So try as she would she simply consider the control of the co
