These four varieties were first found in the vicinity of Philadelphia and it is therefore claimed that the fern is pre-eminently the best plant to typify the floral characteristics of Pennsylvania.

Thirty-one states of the Union have appropriate floral emblems. Some of these were designated by legislative action, some by a vote of the public schools, while others are just taken for granted. Connecticut is the only State which designated the mountain laurel as a floral emblem. The States which by legislative action have adopted floral emblems and the flowers seleted are: Florida, orange blossoms; Montana, bitter root, and Ohio, the scarlet carnation.

The apple blossom is the floral emblem of Arkansas and Michigan, while Delaware has the peach blossom. The golden rod typifies the States of Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky and Nebraska, and in Illinois, Rhode Island and Wisconsin the dainty violet reigns supreme. New Jersey has the golden rod and the violet, with a slight preference for the former.

The sunflower flourishes in Kansas and the wild rose in lowa and in North Dakota, while New York has just the plain rose. Georgia fancies the Cherokeerose. The rhoddendron belongs to both Washington and West Virginia; the magnolia finds favor in Mississippi and Louislana. Maine has the pine cone and tassel and New Mexico has chosen the prickly cactus. Oregon boasts the Oregon grape with pardonable home pride and Colorado sports the festive columbine. In Vermont the red cloyer holds sweet-scented sway and the blue bonnet is worn in Texas. The mistle toe—that sprig of templation in the Yuletide season—is claimed by Oklahoma, and in Maryland the black-eyed Susan is the favorite. Idaho has the syringa, Minnesota the moccasin, South

Mrs. Brock then declares that the present session of the Pennsylvania Legislature should defeat the amendment and save the State from the expense of money and human energy incidental to advertising, campaigning, etc.

Mountain Land Is Covered in Latest Antiweed Bill

The act for the eradication of noxious weeds, which has been a feature of legislative sessions for several years, has turned up this year in a bill presented by Representative Hiram H. Brosius, of Jefferson, and with a provision that owners of "unseated or mountain land" shall be subject to provisions of the act. The bill would put a ban on wild mustard, Canadian thistle, wild carrot, hawk weed, sodom apple and other troublesome weeds, making it the business of the owners to destroy them before they go to seed and requiring constables, supervisors and other officers to remove the weeds if owners fail to do so. If the law officers are derelict they are to be liable to $10 fine and to do the work they can employ men at $2.50 per day, charging the cost to the owner and making him liable to $15 fine as well.

Owing to the vast extent of mountain land, of which the State owns hundreds of thousands of acres, the application of the act would entail hundreds of thousands of acres, the application of the act would entail great expense. Some of the mountain land is held very low, as it has been denuded of trees, and these weeds flourish.

Woman Suffrage Bill to Go Fast

The resolution proposing the woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution will be pushed along in the House and it may be acted upon by committee within the next twenty-four hours. The resolution is in the hands of the judiciary general committee, of which William H. Wilson, Philadelphia, who introduced the resolution, is chalirman.

phia, who introduced the resolution, is chairman.

Both branches of the Legislature are due to meet to-night at 9 o'clock and presentation of bills will be the chief business in order. Many have been prepared to introduce and the various committees will start work to-morrow, the chairmen of no less than ten having announced meetings. The House appropriations committee will await the estimates of the revenue by the fiscal officers before giving any hearings.

fiscal omicers before giving any near-ings.

The calendar of the House is very short, the chief measure being the deficiency bill, which is scheduled to reach the Senate to-morrow.

Misses Kolbenschlag and Swope Change Quarters

One of the most progressive steps that has been taken in local commer-cial circles was made last week by Miss Ida Swope and the Misses Kol-bensclag, when they occupied their prety new quarters at 210 North Third street.

prety new quarters at 210 North Third street.

Large windows provide excellent facilities for the display of merchandise, in which early Spring arrivals in millinery, dress trimmings and neckwear are now being shown.

The owners of both stores are well known land have enjoyed enviable success in their businesses, which were heekun some years ago in an unpretentious way. Step by step they nave grown through their enterprise, and the acquirement of the present quarters for the more comfortable accommodation of their patrons marks another evidence of their progressive spirit.

Billy Sunday says: Philadelphia, Jan. 5, 1915.—In reply to your letter regarding Mel Trotter, he's the greatest mission worker in the country and is taking more 'Down and Outs' and who have been overcome thro' habits of drink and its afthro habits of drink and its af-filiated evils than any rescue mis-sion worker to-day. I can recom-mend him most highly, he's a whirlwind and any one who misses hearing him will miss a real treat."

Dr. H. W. Stough says: Dr. H. W. Stough says:

"Altoona, Pa., Jan. 6, 1915.—It gives me great pleasure to write you a line concerning my good friend, Melvin E. Trotter. He is not only one of the most remarkable trophies of God's grace that is living to-day but one of the most unique personalities now in Christian work. No man can thrill an audience more tenderly than he. To hear his life story is to have a lasting impression made upon one's life. Tell the people by all means to hear Mr. Trotter."

Chas. L. Huston says: "Coatesville, Pa., Jan. 14, 1915.

I have yours of the 7th inst.. and am glad that you have se and am glad that you have secured the services of Melvin Trotter. I do not believe you could have secured a more efficient man nor one better equipped by experience to wisely guide you in the work. Mr. Trotter's own personal testimony is very inspiring and his methods so businesslike that I feel sure they will meet the approval of the good people of Harrisburg."
