TRI-STATE LEAGUE TO CONTINUE GAME

Owners to Make Final Decision at a Meeting to Be Held March 19 in Harrisburg

Tri-State baseball is not yet an uncertainty. Following an injection of George Graham's ginger, at yesterday's meeting, the representatives decided to continue. Another meeting will be held March 19, probably in Harrisburg. It is the belief that an opportunity will be offered the Tri-State to become a farm, and that with a lower limit the game will prove profitable.

Tri-State Leader Who Wants Another Chance

At the head of the Tri-State League is George Graham, sporting writer on the North American. At a meeting in Philadelphia yesterday he gave it out that he was ready to run the league another season and believes the opportunity is ripe for a successful year at a reduced salary.

COUNTY SCHOOL GIRLS LEARN TO COOK, TOO

Fact Is They Can Make Just About as Appetizing a Dinner as Their City Cousins

City high school girls needn't be even a wee bit stuck up because they're being taught how to cook and bake and prepare salads and jams and things. Up in the township high school of Wisconsin the girls of the domestic science class have been doing all these things, and then some, for the last two years.

That dinner set for down in upper county school history. Everything that pertained to it was done by the pupils. For instance the dinner was prepared and served by the manual arts class. The table linen was hemmed by the sewing class, the candelabra shades were made by the manual arts class, the place cards and menus by the drawing class and the ferneries for table decorations by the class in basket weaving. Here was the menu: Oysters on Half Shell Tomato Bisque

BROTHERHOODS CALL RAILROADS UNFAIR

Central, Delaware and Hudson, Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, and some other lines of not so great importance, have joined their influence in a general demand for the repeal of the full crew laws that were passed in Indiana, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey and New York. "Railroad companies have used every effort possible to influence their men not engaged in transportation service to petition the Legislatures of their several States to repeal this law. One of the railroads in particular has adopted methods that are purely coercive in practice, even though in theory the company maintains the men have the right to sign or not to sign petitions of this character.

"Appealing and Deceptive"

"The railroad companies mentioned have gone to the public with a new statement that is certain to be misunderstood. In this latest proclamation, the railway companies have followed one of the most appealing and deceptive programs that could have been devised. The Trainmen herewith quotes briefly from the latest statements given out by the representatives of the roads who have taken it into themselves to defeat the law: "After consideration, and acting to promote the larger interests and the greater good of the public, the corporations, their employees and their security holders, the management of thirteen railroad companies in Pennsylvania and New Jersey have determined to submit an important matter to the public.

BASKETBALL GAME AT STEELTON; CENTRAL PLAYS FRIDAY NIGHT

Local Tossers Anxious to Win Battle on Felton Hall Floor; Both Teams Show Championship Form

Something doing in basketball at Steelton Friday night. Steelton high will line up against Central tossers at Felton hall. This will be the first game between these teams. Last Wednesday Steelton handed a bump to Tech high tossers. The result of Friday's game will be watched with unusual interest because of the fact that Central has been showing the best basketball form for the past three weeks. Central tossers, picked at the opening of the season as a weak team, have forged to the front and are at present strong contenders for the Central Pennsylvania championship.

Steelton high has also been winning laurels and it is going to be a fight to the finish in the scholastic race. Steelton has a good claim on this season's honors and to win from Central Friday night would add to their chances. Central will be accompanied by a large number of rooters.

companies were let alone there would not be organizations of treatment twenty-four hours after they found out they could put them out of existence. This is not said in a spirit of prejudice; it is simply the expression of what is believed to be a fact.

Use an Old Argument

"It throws an improper cost upon the railroads," say the roads. We can go back to 1893 when the railway organizations were insisting on the adoption of safety devices and find this same argument. Then the railroads were going to be put out of business if this "confiscatory legislation" were passed. The millions upon millions of dollars that were needlessly to be spent in providing automatic appliances were held up to the public as a great object lesson that it was hoped would lead it to declare against the enactment of the law. The law was enacted and to-day, the railway companies are getting the benefit from it in longer and heavier trains while the main purpose for which the law was enacted, that is, the safety of the railway employees, has not been served.

Many Reasons For Full Crew

"There are many reasons why an additional man is needed on all trains. Under railroad regulations the two brakemen on top of the train must be sent out ahead and to the rear of the train, when it is stopped between stations, to flag. This leaves only the conductor to make repairs, such as pulled-out drawhead, broken rods, etc. This means a train is delayed unnecessarily, tying up other traffic. "But the big reason why another man is needed on top of the long trains is that it will enable more thorough inspection of the train while it is running on the road, detecting such things as dragging brake beams, broken rods, defective couplers, etc., any of which, if not noticed in time, is liable to cause wrecks, resulting in the destruction of property, loss of life and delayed traffic. Another man is needed in order to enable the rear of the train to transmit signals to the engine.
