

RID STOMACH OF GASES, SOURNESS, AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all stomach distress in five minutes

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief. Its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—Advertisement.

All Attendance Records Smashed at Derry Street

All attendance records at Derry Street United Brethren Church were broken yesterday during the Sunday school session. The membership of the school is 1,074 and yesterday's attendance was 1,032.

The attendance in the big men's Bible class was 27. Two weeks ago it was 230; last Sunday, February 14, it was 250. Next Sunday the membership committee will strive to boost the attendance to 300. To-night the school will hold a Washington birthday banquet. Covers will be laid for 250. Dr. Gossard, president of Lebanon Valley College, will be the principal speaker.

Stough Gets $4,681 and 6,000 Converts in Altoona

Dr. Henry W. Stough, evangelist, and his party, who closed a seven-week evangelistic campaign in Altoona yesterday, were given $4,681.

Approximately 6,000 persons bit the dust during the campaign and the total attendance was 430,000. Dr. Stough said the Altoona campaign was the greatest he has ever had. On the closing day of the Harrisburg campaign more than $5,000 was raised. The total number of trailblitters were about 7,000.

STEVENS M. E. ATTENDANCE IS NEARING 1,000 MARK

With an attendance of 980 at the Stevens Memorial Methodist Episcopal Sunday School yesterday all previous records of attendance at this school were broken. Some idea of the growth of this school is shown by the fact that the average attendance for the year 1913 was 499 and for the year 1914 601. The average for eight Sundays in 1915 is 886. The organized men's Bible class has grown to such proportions that the space allotted it in the school has become too small.

REALIZE VALUE OF LOCAL RELIEF WORK

Thank your committee for this continued interest and assistance." That letter, received by Miss Mary B. Robinson, of the Red Cross division of the Home and War Relief Committee, was the first of a series of letters from Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of the national relief board of the American Red Cross, of the worth of the local emergency work.

Contributions of seeds of a total value of $50 for use by the refugees in planting their gardens were received by the foreign relief division. They will be shipped at once. Supplies for refugees were shipped Saturday and others will be sent this week. Workbags containing pin-cushions, scissors, three colors of darning cotton, thread, buttons, needles, safety pins, hooks and eyes, tape and thimble, are included in the supplies to the refugees.

Of the supplies sent jointly by the Red Cross and foreign divisions three boxes went to a hospital in Serbia located in a windowless tobacco factory, where the wounded were fed on bean and cabbage soup, and where even the nurses were obliged to undergo extreme hardships.

PAVING TO STOP BIG PART OF DUST EVIL

Spring schedule mapped out by the city engineers, and the railways company intends to co-operate in the speeding of this work just as much as possible.

For many years the "dust evil" has been cause for complaint from both residents along Perry street and from people who have had to travel the highway by auto, street car, or other vehicle. The paving of this stretch of five blocks will eliminate the evil in so far as the city's territory is concerned. The line of Paxtang borough begins at Twenty-eighth street, and the paving of the section between that point and Paxtang Park will be up to the borough.

Once the proposed paving is completed there will be only about five squares unpaved between Market Square and Paxtang Park subway entrance.

Police Search For Man Already in Grip of Law

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—Four hours after he was released from the Central Police Station on the charge of being in the streets, Tony Mastropolito, 19 years old, who gave his address as 414 Titan street, was arrested yesterday as the alleged Black Hander who a few weeks ago threatened to dynamite the home of Arthur H. Lea, at 2094 Walnut street, if he refused to hand over $1,000.

The police were surprised yesterday when they found that the alleged chief conspirator in the dynamite plot had been in their hands all the time they had been seeking him. He had been arrested and taken to the Fifteenth and Locust streets station on February 17, a few hours before Albert Miller, a Russian youth and alleged to be his right hand man, was caught by Detectives Callahan and Mahoney at Thirtieth and Market streets, where, it was said, he had arranged to meet Lea and receive the cash.

THE CHERRY TREE THAT NEVER GREW UP

At least a dozen little folks have written to the Telegraph's Birthday story published some years ago by reprinted. Here it is:

Once upon a time a beautiful cherry tree grew in an orchard of Old Virginia, and although it was small it had once been even smaller, for it used to tell all the other trees round about that story.

"One day," it always began, "I was a big red cherry lying on the ground all tempting and ripe and sweet and juicy. A little boy with golden curls, smiling face, and straight limbs came along and thought he must have been only two or three years old, for he could scarcely toddle. First thing I knew he had picked me up, and I saw a smile spread over his baby face; then before I knew what had happened the reddest sort of lips opened and I was thrust into a deep cave. All the juicy part of me was bitten and went down a long dark hallway—where it landed I never could find out; but my seed, the only living thing about me, the little boy took out of his mouth and looked at it. Then sitting down on the ground, he started playing with the dirt, and before I knew it, he had stuck me way down into the earth with his chubby little fingers."

"And then what happened?" asked the other trees, for they always loved to hear this story from the little tree.

"Well, I thought I was done for," the little tree would continue, "but good old Mother Earth took care of me; the little leaves patted me and made me a patch work quilt; King Winter laid a snow blanket over me; and the next Spring when the rains came I felt a queer feeling stirring inside me. I burst that seed. I pushed and pushed; I stuck out my nose and here I was! You all know the rest. I often wonder whether the little fellow they call George who plays Indian around here with a little hatchet, is not the baby grown older who stuck my seed into the earth and gave me my new life?"

Thus the trees chatted and swayed and swayed and chatted in the Virginia orchard, while a little boy in Knickerbockers ran in and out among them, playing his childish games. Every now and then the boy's father came to see how his orchard grew, and one day he noticed the little cherry tree growing in such a queer spot, and seeing it was a straight beautiful tree he loved it better than all the trees of his orchard, so often bringing his small son to sit under its low branches. There he told him stories of men, great and brave and true men who knew how to tell the truth and how to be brave even when it was hard. And as little George listened, the little tree also heard, and learned to love the father, and the truth and the stories of brave men who dared to do right.

One day, however, the little boy came to the orchard in his play, and was full of fire and war—and boyhood (which is just manhood not grown up)—and the little tree saw he was hunting for something to do which looked BIG. Suddenly he spied the poor little tree.

"Hi! hi!" said he. "The very thing! I'll chop this down, and show how strong I am."

So although the little tree tried hard to plead for its life, although it tried hard to tell George what nice cherries it could give him in a few years—he started in. "Chip" went the little hatchet, and "chip" again; "chop" sounded the strokes, and "chop" again; never did George stop until the poor little tree, quivering with fright lay on the ground. Just then the little boy's father came into the orchard.

"Who chopped my cherry tree?" asked he. And the little tree breathing its last could scarcely believe this was the same kind man who had sat under its low branches fondling his son, who stood there glowering above him.

"If I can find the fellow who did this thing," said he, "I'll punish him severely; and there was fight in his eye, and strength in his arm."

"I wonder what little George will do?" thought the dying tree. "I hope he will let me lie." And although it was dying, it tried to whisper, "Remember the stories we heard on this spot, little George!"

Whether the child heard or not, I do not know. But I do know that he stood right up, and it seemed to the little tree he was almost as big and strong and brave looking as his father. He stood up and facing the angry man, said: "FATHER, I CANNOT TELL A LIE! I DID IT WITH MY LITTLE HATCHET."

As the cherry tree breathed its last, a strong man held in his arms a little soldier—a boy who dared to do right, and tell the truth even if he should suffer for it. And the little cherry tree was happy even although it could never grow up.

And was this the end of the tree that never grew up?

I do not know—but I love to think that after the years came twinkling into the blue sky, a little boy crawled out of a house, and cut a tender twig from the dead body of a little tree—

ANOTHER WAGE CUT ON ALL RAILROADS?

they had nothing to do but wait." The dispatch says:

"Plans for a campaign to materially reduce expenses is contemplated by the railroads of the eastern territory. The latest step to be taken, according to reports originating in New York, is a cut in the wages of all employees from engineers to trackmen."

"Officials of the Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia and Reading Railway refused to deny or confirm the report that the fifty-two eastern carriers will unite to bring about a reduction in wages."

"According to the New York report the reduction will be made in the Spring and is a direct reply to the threat of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers to fight for an increase within the next few months."

Will Affect 75,000 Men

"If the railroads carry out their intention of instituting a cut in wages it will affect 75,000 employees and payroll approximating $600,000,000 annually. The railroad, said to be identified with the movement, comprised those who were recently granted an increase in freight rates by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

"It is said that the railroads will base their campaign on their inability to pay existing dividends so long as the employees make excessive demands."

"Hire a Man" Campaign Opened in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—Thousand of men are in need of work. A little repair job about the house would furnish some employment, and a job may keep some family from want not actual starvation. Announced that a "Hire a Man" campaign opened to-day, conducted by the Department of Works, Director Cooke points out one way at least by which every household and property owner in the city may aid in some measure in relieving distress.

Have these repair jobs done now when men need work instead of waiting until work will need men, is a trenchant remark put forward by Director Cooke in urging community interest in providing employment.

You know of no man in your neighborhood who needs work the charitable societies do," says Director Cooke and you can phone to them for such man."
