IT RUINS HAIR TO WASH IT WITH SOAP

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

THE MASTER KEY

By John Fleming Wilson

By special arrangement for this paper, a photo-dram, corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theaters. By arrangement made with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company it is not only possible to read "The Master Key" in this paper, but also afterward to see moving pictures of our story.

COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY JOHN FLEMING WILSON

She knew that when her absence was certain both Mr. Reynolds and Sir Donald would come after her. Night came, and she was still pushing on, though hungry and weary. In the darkness she perforce kept to open paths, and it was on one of these that a panting native found her.

"Achmet!" she whispered when he raised his contorted face to hers. In a few words he told her what had happened. She said curtly, "I know that. Where is he?"

Sir Donald's former servant looked at her and remembered the strangeness of things done by white women. He led the way back toward the hut, muttering now and again of the terrible things he had seen.

And while Ruth was thus defying all precedent and going to the aid of the man she loved Wilkerson had found himself again hemmed in, cut off in the darkness from escape to the city.

Though he and Dorr had driven the hillmen away from the hut and quenched their eagerness of assault, they still hovered in the little gullies, and on every hand the fugitive found himself confronted by a heard but unseen enemy.

He stole back to the hut and peered in. John was still bound in the chair, and Drake's body lay huddled on the floor.

He made his preparations quickly, piling some dried grass and fine rubbish against one corner of the hut.

When the pile was once alight he dumped some powder on it and ran swiftly away, hiding a few hundred yards back.

The hut took fire slowly, but the glare accomplished his purpose. It slowly drew the watchers toward it.

Satisfied that no one would be spying on him now, but that all would have eyes only for the fire, he set forth quickly, careless of the fact that John Dorr must be burning alive.

In the darkness he passed Achmet and Ruth. The blaze had almost entirely enveloped the hut when Ruth finally staggered in and with a sob of joy cut John's bonds and half dragged him through the swirling smoke into the open.

When she had done this she promptly fainted.

The smoldering embers were sending up blue spirals of smoke into the morning sky when Consul Reynolds and Sir Donald spurred their wearied horses up to where John and Achmet squatted with Ruth between them, still but dimly conscious.

Dorr briefly explained his experiences and related how Ruth had suddenly appeared, just as he had given up hope.

Sir Donald, kneeling by Ruth's side, merely patted her hand.

The next morning Mrs. Reynolds laid down the law in set terms to the party assembled around the breakfast table.

"You must get this young lady back to America," she said, "papers or no papers."

John and Sir Donald nodded without glancing at each other. Thus it was that a couple of days later old Tom Kane at the "Master Key" mine received a cablegram reading:

Wilkerson Darnell aboard steamship Pacific; Frisco, 20th, with papers. We follow next steamer, the DORR.

Thus it was that the struggle between Wilkerson and John Dorr was again transformed to the valley in which lay the "Master Key" mine.

Wilkerson and Jean Darnell, with the precious papers in their possession, slipped away hurriedly, taking the first steamer that sailed.

He had told her about Drake's death, though unable to say how it had happened. Privately he had no regrets.

The young man had served his purpose, and it was by no means doubtful that Mrs. Darnell would have seen to it that he had his reward, for she liked him as much as it was in her nature to care for any man, he thought.

"He was an awfully good sort," she said to Wilkerson one night as they leaned over the rail and watched the long swells from the bow speed fan-wise into the infinity of the sea.

"Yes, the fellow had his good points," he admitted.

"I miss him," she said simply. Later she added thoughtfully, "I think he was in love with me."

Wilkerson laughed. Mrs. Darnell glanced at him with an expression strange on her handsome face. "Yes, I am sure he loved me."

"In vain," he returned lightly. "I don't know whether it might have been wholly in vain after all," she murmured. "Life has given me little love of that kind. It seems as if I had always been a woman who for mere self protection could not let any one love me or let myself love him."

Hurrah! Dance All Day! My Corns All Gone! It's a corker, the best wrinkle ever devised, and one that's safe, sure, dependable and painless. Corn troubles are over, foot lumps fade away fast, you get just what you need once you paint the sore spots with old reliable Putnam's Corn Extractor. Bowman's Founded 1871. Beginning to-morrow morning, the women of Harrisburg may witness a rare feature in Corsetry, when Miss Dougherty, a well-known New York Corsetiere, will Fit Corsets On Living Models. Through an exclusive arrangement with the makers to demonstrate the merits of La Vida Corsets. This display and lecture will take place three days: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday February 23rd to 25th. In the Corset Department—second floor, from 9:30 to 11:00 A. M., and 2:30 to 4:00 P. M. each day. Miss Dougherty comes to us direct from New York, with the latest authentic Fashion news of the metropolis and Europe. She will use three live models in her fitting demonstrations, and will give gossip talks on the latest fashions, while she describes in detail, the Spring styles of La Vida Corsets. Proof will also be given that no woman need have just the happy-medium between stout and thin to produce a good figure. The new designs embody slightly higher busts; incurve at waist line, shorter skirts and all other gown-demands for the coming season. You will surely be delighted with their dainty, shapely beauty and their practical lines. The Corset Department, during the hours of demonstration will be excluded from the store, and guards placed at every entrance, to insure the admittance of women only. Our invitation includes every woman who desires to come and we promise those who attend, an instructive and interesting affair.

MILITARY CODE WILL BE PUSHED. Legislators in Charge Plan to Get Action Soon After the Recess Is Finished.

No time is to be lost by the chairmen of the military committees of the Senate and House in securing action on the proposed military code and the bill will probably be among the first to come up after the recess ends on March 1. Adjutant General Thomas J. Stewart is in readiness to appear before the committees to explain his provisions and to inform the members of the details of the National Government to have an act in this State which will make the organized militia of Pennsylvania a complete division with all of the auxiliary arms of the service. The War department officials have been anxious to have Pennsylvania pass this law because it will be an example for other States and also permit the formation of the additional units of the infantry, artillery and other branches of the service.

Uncle Sam will provide the funds for the additional batteries, although it is doubtful if they will be organized immediately unless an emergency, not now anticipated, turns up. It costs a large amount of money for each battery but to make the Keystone State complete eight additional batteries would have to be formed. The biennial appropriation to the Guard will depend upon action on the code as provision will have to be made for maintenance of the organizations. The appropriation now in hand calls for the same amount as last session, but it can be amended. Thus far no opposition has appeared to the proposition that the Governor should appoint officers above second lieutenant, which makes the most radical change.
