SCHOOLMASTERS WIL

HOLD MEETING

Ninth Session of Central Penna.

Body Will Be Addressed by

Prominent Educators

Up For Annual Concert

The fourth episode in motion pictures at the Royal Theater

3rd St. Above Cumberland

Monday Evening

The great serial of Love, Hate,

Revenge, Money and Mystery

George Randolph Chester

NORMA PHILLIPS

Former Mutual Girl.

SEE

In Motion Pictures at

See the pictures and solve the mystery of the bride's

All Star Cast

Every Monday the story by

George Randolph Chester

Monday March 1 EPISODE NO. 5

Norma Phillips

disappearance

FIFTH EPISODE. Woman In Trouble.

CHAPTER I. AT old black Aunt Debby was dressed in her best marketing clothes, the green percale with the big reliow flowers, and the poppies was set for forward on her clukless wig. The marketing trip to the city had been one of Aunt Debby's the high pitched laugh of excitement

"You'll stop at Ned's for Mr. Moore, Debby," said Mrs. Moore, "Yassum." Aunt Debby stole a glance at June's portrait on the wall. "You—

At the sound of that name Bouncer ose instantly, head up, ears perked, mil wagging, eyes eager, mouth open. He was at the window with his paws on the sill and ready to bark. He whited instead and dropped his paws will and ready to bark.

Where was June? That puzzling problem filled the entire mind of Aunt Debby as by the side of the driver she spun into the city in the Moore limousine. And that puzzling problem filled the entire mind of John Moore as he

Today the Buoyancy and High Pitched Laugh Were Absent.

Where was June? A dozen private etectives were scouring the city of New York for her, and they reported to stern faced young man who sat in the lonely apartments which June and he had fitted up to be their nest, his only companion a miniature of his

Where was June? Who was this What was mysterions Gilbert Blye? is power over Ned Warner's bride?

Ned seized his hat and strode forth into the streets in his never ending earch for June. At that moment the door of a strange house had slammed abruptly behind took up the extension phone.

beautiful June Warner. And Gilbert June looked at her hat and Blye had furnished this address to seemed quite bewildered. June's employment agency.

A blase looking page girl inspected the hall, then with a significant grin left June standing there and swaggered through a door at the end of the hall. June was startled as that door In there, amid wreaths of curling blue oke, moved handsomely gowned wonen, and many of them nonchalantly in the lock. A large yellow haired woman came durrying from the salon with June's man deepened as she listened to the mployment agency card in her hand. man's reply.

eign, and she led the way to a small now she turned her eyes imploringly side room at the left of the salon. As toward the stony, yellow haired one. June reluctantly entered the strangely "But I just must have it! Eight hunfurnished little room at the left Gilbert dred dollars!"

Blye came in at the front door. The man's voice boomed an incredu-ing in his dark eyes he hurried straight a sharp question.

back toward the little room in which "Why—wby, it's to pay bills! Yes, stood June, now alone and frightened.
At that instant a huge, clumsy maid came tumbling up from the basement, I didn't want to tell you this until we followed by a puff of yellow smoke. could sit down quietly together, only with her eyes distended and her moute open, ready for the yell of "Fire!" she the allowance isn't enough, savesome the property of the salon, but Yes, I know you've raised it—oh!"

The man's heavy voice had interruption of the salon back before she could reach it Gilbert Blye

The man's heavy v had her roughly by the arm and pushed her calmily, coldled ed her through the door which led to the basement. He stood staring at the June hung up the hrough that opening, glanced again toward June's room and dashed down the stairs. There were two desks and a filing

That was a strangely furnished little all right."
com in which June found herself. Mrs. Pe cabinet and some office chairs, but there were a luxurious couch and dainty hangings, a soft rug and pink paneled walls and ceiling. It was all so incongrous. And the work-it was explained the posting into small blank hoeks of many memorandum slips. Each silp contained the name of a wo-main and a sum of money. There were no slips for men, but there were index eards about men. June pussled as to what sort of business this might be.

The page girl swished in with one of the memorandum slips. The yellow head, whose face was puffy and more highly colored than was wholesome, took the slip, looked at the name on it. frowned, shook her head and went out with the girl. She entered the salon and stood surveying the scene with cold abstraction. Around a long table sat the women whom June had seen. They all had cards in front of them and stacks of playing chips, and a rawboned woman sitting on a higher chair than the rest was dealing. The yellow haired woman fixed her attention on the gambler next to the dealer. She was a fluffy blend with a feverish glitter in her eyes, and she was bent so in-tently upon the fall of the cards that Poor June! She glanced about her with growing repugnance. She was abjectly miserable, and suddenly she she did not notice the door open and Ned! Why had she run away from

In the gambling room the fluffy blond who had played so feverishly staked and lost the last chip in front of her. She turned impatiently to look for the page girl. She met instead the cold, hard eye of the yellow haired woman, who quietly motioned her. The player rose reluctantly, and fright came into her face as she followed into the hall and to the little office where June had been installed.
"You've reached the limit, Mrs. Perry," announced the yellow haired wo-man, turning on the unlucky one sharply as she closed the door. Here is the I. O. U. Belle brought to me. I have not O. Ka'd it.' "It's only for $50," faltered Mrs.

"I wouldn't O. K. it for 50 cents," snapped the other. "Now, I want action. You'll telephone your husband from this room."

"No, no!" The woman wrung her hands. "I'll talk to him tonight!"

"I know that game," she scorned, and from June's desk she took an index card. "Eight-o-eight-o Garden," she told the new secretary. "Ask for Mr. Perry, and say that his wife wishes to speak with him.'

"No!" cried Mrs. Perry hysterically, and reached over June's shoulder to take the phone. The new secretary had made no move toward the phone. She was staring at the yellow haired woman in astonishment. That deterin emergencies. She snatched up the phone herself and called the number.

"You women think I'm a mark," scornfully stated to Mrs. Perry while around her. she waited. "You'd sting me for a thousand dollars rather than sting your usband for it. See this card?" She held it out. It contained the name of Jackson W. Perry, his business address, his home address, his financial rating, probable income, clubs and telephone numbers. And the unfortunate Mrs. Perry seemed to shrink into hopeless despair as she realized the implacable organization against which she had pitted herself. "Mr. Perry, please." The yellow haired woman's voice had undergone "His wife wishes to speak with him."

a complete change. It was very pleasant of inflection, though it rasped. She handed over the telephone, and June, seeing Mrs. Perry's unsteadiness rose and compassionately gave the woman her chair. The yellow haired one walked calmly over to her own desk and June looked at her hat and coat. She seemed quite bewildered. She could not quite understand what this was all about, but she did know that it was June impudently in the dim light of all unpleasant and heartless and degrading. She was starting to go when something on Mrs. Perry's face touched her sympathies and held her.

"Yes, it's Gwen," trembled Mrs. Per-opened and a blaze of light came out ry, her nervous fingers clutching des-with the chatter of many shrill voices. perately to keep the quaver from her voice. "I-I hope I haven't interrupt ed anything important."

"Not very." The man's voice could puffed at cigarettes. At that instant be heard distinctly outside the phone.
the smiling Gilbert Blye's key grated "Jack"—the voice was full of plead "Jack"-the voice was full of pleading-"I-I have to have some money." The frown of the yellow haired wo-

"Right this way, honey," she rasped "I know it's a week before my allowin a voice to which the honey was for- ance is due." urged Mrs. Perry, and

With a smile upon his lips and glint- lous exclamation over the wire; then yes, Jack, I know I was supposed to keep them paid out of my allowance!

June hung up the receiver. She was moke which came curling ominously surprised to see the yellow haired wo-prough that opening, glanced again man put up her own phone and come across the room with a benign expres

"Cheer up." she advised, "Hubby's

Mrs. Perry straightened up. "Yes," she said and moistened her lips, "he said that he'd go over those bills with me tonight."

"I heard him myself." And the yeltow haired woman grinned across at so incongraous. And the work—it was June. "Here's your I. O. U., dearle. queer too. The yellow haired woman I've O. K.'d it. You better go in and came in from the parlor presently and play awhile for your nerves."

The terrified little blond looked up incredulously. It was as if she had been given a tirink of some strong stimulant, and she clutched eagerly at the memorandum slip. Perhaps with that she could win back all that she

"Thank you!" she gasped and hur-

The other woman grabbed her phone. "Elight-o-cight-o Garden!" she called. "Hello! Mr. Perry, please. This is his wife's friend."

"Hello, Mr. Perry! Say, your wife is at 48 Kingsley court gambling, and she's going to be exposed in half an hour if you aren't here to pay her

The man at the other end of the wire apparently took a moment to gasp for breath; then the wire boomed.

"All right, bring the police if you want," snapped the yellow haired wom

if you and your wife can. And, say, checks don't go. Bring cash. It's eight-

June stood aghast. A gambling house!

CHAPTER II.

N the corner near Mrs. O'Keefe's home Officer Grady walked over to lift his cap politely and to help Marie across the street with her empty market basket. Two blocks up Officer Dowd carried her basket two blocks off his beat to where Officer Kernan held up the traffic both ways while she described the chicken potpie she intended to make for dinner. All this was, first, because the Widow O'Keefe's husband had been the most popular man on the force and, second, because Marie, plain of feature though she was, had found in herself an unexpected knack for pleasing policemen.

In the market June's maid, compan ion and protector wandered from stall to stall, selecting her tiny purchases of fruit and vegetables. She was just deciding on the tremendously impor-tant selection of the chicken itself when suddenly an avalanche of flaming color fell upon her and a voice say, wha's Miss Junie?" Aunt Debby! Her two fat black hands were gripped on Marie's arm. A crowd began to gather immediately.

"I do not know you!" she declared.
"You don't know me!" Aunt Debby

Marle with a sudden jerk freed herself from that earnest grasp and would have been far down the street had it not been for the thickening crowd.

unbelievable agility, threw both arms

"What's the matter here?" The gruff voice of a big policeman.

"I want that woman took in charge!"

"Oh, you do!" And the officer of the law turned on Marie an eye which was perfectly ready to be suspicious in spite of its disinclination. "What's the

The voice of Aunt Debby rose shrilly triumphant:

It was Marie's turn to look astounded.
"Oh, she did! When? Here in the "Yas, sir, she did. Right up hyah at

"Well, what's that on your arm?"

And Aunt Debby's eyes dropped as she saw the stern gaze of the policeman fixed on the rusty old band bag which

"She done stole my pocketbook!

charge?"

market?"

the chicken stand!"

panted Aunt Debby, and she rolled her

Aunt Debby, plunging forward wheezed, her broad bosom jumping up and down. "You say you don't know me! Ain't I Debby? Ain't you Ma-

Marie straightened herself stiffly.

"You, Marle? Wha's Miss Junie? I

"I guess I can stand the notoriety

June moved for her hat and coat.

ried from the room.

TARRISBURG TELEGRAPH

majesty of the law asserted itself.

"Please don't arrest her!" begged

The three policemen who had been assisting Aunt Debby turned quickly as Officer Dowd pushed smilingly through the crowd to the side of Ma

"What's the trouble?" he inquired. Marie whispered her explanation.

"Now you hike!" ordered the police-man and gave Aunt Debby a poke in Slowly she waddled to the chicken market, where she found her basket intact in the stall of the poultryman, and slowly she walked up a block to the adjacent avenue, where stood the Moore limousine.

"Jerry," she called as she climbed breathlessly to her seat by the driver, "I done seed Marie! And whah she Aunt Debby's eyes rolled. She could talk no more, but she made a circular motion with her hand, and Jerry un seemed to be tremendously prolific of port Ned Warner and John Moore and hree long and lanky detectives were headed for the market, with Jerry and inquiries after Marie led all the way

CHAPTER III.

threw open the parlor door. "Right in here." She grinned as she switched

The yellow haired woman found him

low haired woman.

as he repeated his demand.

The woman's lip curled.

in this place. He was equally impress-ed when he turned and saw the beau-

"She had no reason to be in trouble.

I give my wife an ample allowance."
The man turned from June.

before Ned, whom she loved, and she saw Mrs. Perry in that same attitude before this stern husband. "What right have you to call it a gift?"

HEAVY jawed, firm mouthed, square headed and level eyed man stopped at the door of 48

Kingsley court and rang the bell with a vigorous jerk.
"Mr. Perry," he announced bluntly.

goes Miss Junie is!"

ideas today, said:
"Mistah Ned!"

eagerness.

mistake."

the ribs.

"You, Marie," sereamed Aunt Deblosing $2 in a friendly penny auction by, "you say you don't know me?" game, and she's been trying to over"Go on about your business," or take it ever since." dered the big policeman.

"I don't leave this spot without that arm A gentle hand was laid on the man's girl!" declared Aunt Debby, planting her fists on her hips and spreading her feet apart. Then the outraged "You will help her?" The low, sweet voice was full of more than appeal; it was full of trust and confidence. "Hey, Billy! Call the wagon!" it

There was a slight convulsive heav-ing of Perry's shoulders, but that was all. He drew out a pocketbook and counted some money into the yellow haired woman's hand.

She was too late; the wagon had "Now, bring Gwen to me," he said, been called.

"Sorry, miss," said the officer who eyes no sternness, his smile no bitter. had first interfered, "but this party ness. went too far." And he turned to help Williams

With moist eyes June hurried from toss the culprit in.
"Oh, Mr. Dowd!" The voice of Marie was suddenly bright and care free.
"the room. She was glad that she had come, rie was suddenly bright and care free.

She Saw the Dark, Black Vandyked Face of Gilbert Blye. There seemed to be small profit in circulating, and after a few minutes of this tedious process Aunt Debby, who a hurry to go! The yellow haired woman overtook her in the hall, and she patted June on the shoulder.

"You're all right, Peachic," she approved, "but remember this, the fixer cots the bilster." To Ned's they drove, and within five minutes after Aunt Debby's excited regets the blisters."

June was putting on her hat and coat when Mrs. Perry wonderingly fol-lowed the yellow haired woman through the hall. It was yellow head's Aunt Debby up in front. At that point they scattered, and it was Ned whose regular plan of campaign to confront people without previous explanation.

It saved wear and tear on the nerves.

A moment later there was a shriek, and as June came to the door Mrs. Perry, her eyes wild and her hair fly ing, came rushing back through the hall. She had gone only as far as the parlor door and at the first sight of her husband had run, overwhelmed with "I'll unreasoning terror. Back into the sa- swer?" "Yes, sir." replied the impudent page lon Mrs. Perry fled and to her place girl, by no means abashed, and she next the dealer. With snakelike swiftnext the dealer. With snakelike swift-ness she jerked open the money drawin here." She grinned as she switched er beneath the dealer's card box and on the lights for him and saw that he snatched from it the shining revolver was oppressed by the fact of the drawn which she had so often seen there curtains. There was an instant's commotion, shrieks of fright, an overturning of standing solidly in the center of the room, facing the door.

"Where is my wife?" he loudly demanded.

"Don't bark at me!" snapped the yellow helpd woman's wrist, and

The man abated none of its intensity Mrs. Perry's life went into the ceiling. Jackson Perry came bursting through "In a minute." The yellow haired the door and found June in the midst of the pandemonium, with the limp of the pandemonium, with the limp "I don't mind turning over a parlor to

Mrs. Perry in her arms. settle a domestic scrap, but I want my bill settled first. Eight-fifty." "Gwen!" cried the man, and the call came from his heart. He had feared "How do I know that she is guilty of that she was dead, but she opened he gambling? How do I know that she is eyes as he took her in his arms, and there in the midst of that frantic commotion their lips met in the kiss of a

The woman's lip curied.

"Want to see her with the goods?

Well, Jackson, if you'll promise to behave I'll show her to you through a ed only to see Perry clasp his wife in the self-only to see Perry cl his arms; then, leaving wide the salon The man's fists clinched convulsively. door, she rushed toward the basement "You'd better pass over my eight-fif-ty first," said the yellow haired wodoor.

"Ready with that fire?" she yelled. "It's ready, all right," replied the page girl, bursting out of the base-"Just a minute, please." A sweet voice, low, gentle, cultured—no such voice as the man had expected to hear ment door, and with her came mendous cloud of smoke. It poured into ed when he turned and saw the beauther the hall and into the salon. The page tiful young girl who had glided through girl was choking with it. "They foozled the rear door, her face full of serious the first one, and the boss has been fighting ever since, trying to keep the "Who rang for you?" snapped the shack from burning down."

yellow haired woman, her eyes flaming with instant resentment.

June rushed out through the hall.

"Not that way!" called the page girl.

"I stayed in this house for no other "The cops are at the door! Wait for reason than to see Mr. Perry," and the firemen!" nounced June, with no trace of timidi-The explanation of that was slow in coming to June. When the yellow hair-"Mrs. Perry is in deep trouble and always to fear the police, and the only "She he was a second to the police and the only to foll a raid of the police and the only to foll a raid of the police and the only to foll a raid of the police and the only to foll a raid of the police and the only to foll a raid of the police and the only to foll a raid of the police and the police and way to foil a raid was to confuse it with a fire.

woman and with a jerk of a tasseled curtain cord drew aside the great yel-

"RUNAWAY JUNE" WILL HEREAFTER APPEAR AS A SERIAL, MONDAY, WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY IN THIS PAPER

ried down the cross street. At an irregular corner, where half a dozen dingy streets and alleys plunged to gether and, apparently dizzled by the impact, wandered angularly and nim-lessly off, June met on a narrow crossing a being fairly figgling with alcohol. Her heart popped into her throat, and she was about to turn back, for she would have died rather than to have brushed clothes with the object, when the creature, catching sight of her, immediately stepped far over into the mud, jerked off his battered cap and with it made a courtesy so sweeping that he was unable to rise up for het, immediately stepped far over inte the mud, jerked off his battered cap and with it made a courtesy so sweep ing that he was unable to rise up for five minutes afterward.

That was enough for one day, and June ran down the street, past the little fountain, into the sanctuary of the Widow O'Keefe's house, up the twe flights of stairs and dropped into the wicker chair.

"Slippers," was all she said.

Marie was on her knees in an instant, showing every gum.

"Aunt Debby!" she cried, and from then on until long after the wonder ful chicken potple had been consumed the conversation flowed with never an ebb.

It was good to have found a refuge like this. It seemed far, far away from the New York which these two knew, and it was as if no one could ever find them here. They were safe. Safe!

Is one ever safe? As Ned Warner stood trying vainly to extract information from Officer Dowd June's car flashed by him and he caught a glimpso of her.

Officer Dowd was astonished to have his particularly insistent questioner stop abruptly in the middle of a sentence and go dashing madly after a street car. In half a block the young man gave up that absurd chase.

The ninth annual session of the Schoolmasters' Association of Central Pennsylvania, will be held in the library of Technical high school, Saturday, March 6. The morning session will begin at 2 o'clock.

The minth annual session of the Schoolmasters' Association of Central Pennsylvania, will be held in the library of Technical high school, Saturday, March 6. The morning session will begin at 2 o'clock.

The minth annual session of the Schoolmasters' Association of Central Pennsylvania, will be held in the library of Technical high school, Saturday, of The traffic thickened just beyond, so that for three or four blocks Ned was able to keep sight of the car as it stopped and started. Finally it was ocked, and Ned was able to catch up with it. June was no longer among the passengers! "There was a girl on your car wearing a fur cap with a green tassel!" breathlessly said Ned to the conductor. "Bet your life."

'Where did she leave your car?" "On the track."

Samuel Sherman, a soph at Tech, and a member of the orchestra, will receive the first prize of $3 for selling more tickets for the annual concert of the Tech Orchestra, to be held to-night, than any other student in the school.

Lambert Kinch, also a student in the second years class, will receive the second prize of $2. Professor Updegrove has put the inishing touches on the boys, and from the number of tickets reported sold, the concert will excel all previous ones. Ned dropped off the car, left to his own logic. June had alighted some-ner HELD AFTER SCHOOL CLOSES where within these last two blocks. HELD AFFER SCHOOL CLOSES

Re-examinations at Tech for students having conditions, will be held the two first weeks in March. An innovation will be instituted at that time, when the re-examinations, in charge of the instructors will be held in the study ball after the regular school session, the study ball of the regular school session, and the study ball of the regular school session, the study ball of the regular school session, the study below the study below the study below the study below the study becompelled to enter the next lower class. One going farther west would in all probability have taken a more conven-ient car line. To the east lay a tenement district of old, small houses. On chance Ned struck east.

"Have you seen a girl wearing a fur

The young man with the yellow derby over one ear shifted his cigarette.
"I'll be the Patsy. What's the an-people. On a corner where half a dozen streets and alleys had staggered themselves by running into each other Ned found a human being swaying gently in the breeze. "Have you seen"-

Ned stopped after one glance into that vacuous face and one whist from that far from vacuous breath. "Pipe up, pal," husked the jiggled one. Ned went over his formula.

"Have you seen a girl wearing a fur cap with a green tassel?" what do you think of that?"

"A guy with black whiskers," and the human being illustrated the Vandyke by a motion of his hand, "asked me the same thing!"

Blye again! Ned clinched his fist.

"Did you see the girl?"
The object winked.

"'S none of your business!" he answered with great dignity and reeled

I give my wife an ample and the salon, and as she pass. The man turned from June.

"You give it." Across June's mind there flashed again the whole of her own vital problem—that whatever the own vital problem—that whatever the own vital problem from the husband bert Blye!

Ned gazed after min in particular the was no use to question that fellow any further, but it was certain that the man had seen June. She had passed this way then. She was some passed this way then. where near. And Blye! Blye, too, had passed this way! Ned chose the most direct street, the one which led to a litlow hangings of the salon windows, which ran to the floor.

direct street, the one windows the fountain, where another street angled sharply into it. And this foun-right have you to call it a game.

The man stopped and turned to June with a puzzled brow. She had set with a puzzled brow. She had Perry. You give your wife an allowance that covers everything but emerogencies. You figure the plumber to come in three times a year, and if he comes in four she loses. If she has a mad passion to treat a few of her friends to ice cream sodas she has to All unconscious that she was purely and grown careless by her three the point and wides the light them.

wait till next month's allowance day. Sued and grown careless by her three would meet. Gilbert Blye and Ned pay. I'll bet this poor little wife of thoroughly protected house, June words first got into trouble through alighted at her usual corner and hurhad murder in his heart'.

Former Mutual Girl in the role of

'Runaway June"

Admission . . . 10c Children . . . . . 5c

Special to The Telegraph

court. One of the principal objections interposed against the stands com-plained of is that they are not neces-sary for the accommodation of the jub-FIGHTING AGAINST LICENSE

ENTERTAINED FOR CHARITY

Wrightsville, Pa., Feb. 27.— An entertainment was held in the Odd Fellows' Hall, in this place, by local talent of the purpose of raising funds for the Benevolent Association, which contributes toward the support of the uses titute who may be found in the neighborhood. The sum realized will enable the organization to dispense charity where needed.

While She Described the Chicken Pot-gripped her thick forearm. She had forgotten that detail in her planning.

"Open it up," ordered the officer, who opened it himself. It had bills and silver in it, Aunt Debby's reading spec-powder and a tea biscuit.

"Well-well-well!" gulped Aunt Debby, her eyes batting. "She done stole my other pocketbook!" "That's enough!" growled the officer.

'No negro ever had two pocketbooks. What have you got to say, miss?"

And he was quite respectful to Marie. "I don't know her, Mr. Officer," smiled Marie.

tacles and her farsighted ones, some like the peppermint lozenges, brunette face Perry.

It had bills and

SENIORS BANQUET JUNIORS , senior colors, orange and black, inter- Games, music and a dime contest were Enjoyable Affair of Mechanicsburg
High School Classes
Special to The Telegraph
Mechanicsburg, Pa., Feb. 27.—Last evening the senior class of the high class gave the annual banquet to the juniors, high school faculty and guests at Bobb's Cafe. Decorations of the