Why My Wife Left Me

By DOROTHY DIX

By DOROTHY DIX
"I lost my wife," said the tenth man, "because I did not understand that what is sauce for the gander is sauce for the goose. Also because I put a sublime and childlike faith in the certainty that the ordinary woman's abnormal power to forgive any kind of treatment that a man hands out to her, and to go on loving him still."
I started out my married life with a very strict moral code for my wife and a lax one for myself. I thought a great deal about her duty to me and very little about my duty to her. I was to be as much of a rounder as I pleased. She was to always meet me with a glad, sweet smile—when ever I chose to come home.
"Of course, that kind of matrimonial platform is accepted by some women, but they are either poor-spirited creatures or else they are financially dependent on the husbands that force them into such a contemptible position. They endure the situation because they lack the courage to assert themselves and fight back, or because the husband means a meal ticket to them, and they can't afford to quarrel with their bread and butter."
"Unfortunately for me, my wife belonged to neither class. She has as brave and intrepid a spirit as was ever housed in a human body and she would have made enough money of her own to make her independent of me for her support. And, incidentally, I should like to remark here that one of the reasons that so many men object to women going into gainful pursuits is because they recognize that we men would have to treat our wives as equals if they became financially independent. The only reason that women stand for many things from men that they do stand for because, if they get up and leave their husbands, they have no place to go, no way of making a living."
However, so far as the money question is concerned, it cut no figure in the wreck of our happiness. I was never a tightwad, and my wife was one of the women who would have gone out to scrub rather than make a profession of matrimony. Our trouble came from the fact that I believed that the bonds of matrimony should all be worn by the wife and the husband go free.

which I indulged myself—just silly flirtations when a man plays at making love for the sheer amusement of the same.
"Oh, I did the usual fool stunts that so many other married men do—opened wine for chorus girls and complained about the size of the baby's milk bill, sent flowers and presents to other women, and forgot my wife's birthday. Went on joy rides, and had midnight suppers at roadhouses with crowds that whooped things up until almost day, and then went home as cross as a bear."
"When my wife spoke to me about the way I was doing I accused her of being jealous and demanded to know if she thought that I intended to be always tied to her apron strings. Furthermore, I informed her that I intended to preserve my own personal liberty, and do as I chose without giving any account to her, and I also informed her that after my hard day's work I needed the relaxation of some gayer amusement than sitting around home with her and the kids."
"Would you like to see me go about to parties with other men, and take midnight rides with other men in their automobiles? They looked at me with a curious look in her eyes. 'I could, you know,' she added."
"Certainly I wouldn't stand for it," I cried hotly. "You're a woman and my wife, and I expect you to remember that. It's different with a man."
"Oh, I don't know. We are both human," she said. "If it were not for the children I should amuse myself quite as well as you do. But their mother's name must be kept blameless."
"Finally there came a time when one of the children suddenly sickened and died all in a few hours. I had gone that night with a roistering crowd to a dance, while my wife was alone fighting with death for the child's life. They telephoned everywhere for me, but could not find me, and when I came home in the morning white crepe was fluttering from my door and my little son was dead."
"My grief and shame and unavailing regret brought me up with a sharp turn. On my knees I repented and begged my wife's forgiveness, never doubting that a woman could forgive all and wipe her husband's transgressions from her mind as one wipes off a slate."
"Everything will be all right now, I shall never leave you again," I said. "We will be happy as we were at first."
"She smiled a smile that was sadder than tears."
"You think that our being happy you can come back home when you are tired of others and take your old place in my heart and life. What do you think I have been thinking and feeling? Oh, no. You yourself shut the door, and the door of a woman's heart, once shut, never opens again. Men make many mistakes, but the greatest mistake they ever make is in thinking they can come back to their wives."
"And then I knew that through my own folly I had lost the only woman I ever really loved."

Miss Fairfax Answers Queries

ARE YOU SURE?

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am eighteen. About a year ago I was employed as stenographer in a concern where my employer is a married man. About nine months ago he told me that he was going to get a divorce as soon as his wife, who is sick, improved. He has told me that he loves me and I reciprocate the love.
The doctors say his wife will not live long. He has told me this, and has asked me if I would not wait for him. I told him that he is very mean to talk about marriage to me when the doctors look for the death of his wife. He said he did not care for his wife in the least, and drifted into marrying her. I told my mother about this and she said that I should wait for him if I loved him, which I most surely do.

At this time there is another young man calling on me at my house, who loves me also. He is a very nice young man, but I have very little feeling for him.
I consider it a very gruesome piece of business to be waiting for a woman to die in order that you may marry her husband, but this is only a little more shameful than waiting for him to divorce her in order that you may marry him. However, since your mother approves of this match and you love the man, I hardly feel as if you need my advice or opinion on the subject. Can you trust yourself at eighteen to make a wise choice? Are you sure you are not dazzled by the thought of having a man who is so much your senior and your employer besides showing you attentions?

BEAUTY VS. BRAINS
Dear Miss Fairfax:
Will you please state how a girl who is pretty and stupid triumphs over a girl who is homely and brilliant, and give illustrations in favor of the former.
INDIFFERENT.
A girl who is pretty and stupid triumphs over a girl who is homely and brilliant only temporarily except in extreme cases. The things that really make a girl loved are charm and sweetness of character, and, according to as whether the pretty stupid girl or the brilliant homely one has these valuable assets, she wins or loses in the social game. At a dance the pretty girl is more likely to have partners than the homely one. But when it comes to friendships, the clever, interesting girl holds hers far better than does the dull one, however, pretty she is.

WOMEN REQUIRE WASH
WOMEN TO REGISTER

Nurse Advocates Frequent Inspections of Premises by Health Officers
The washtub should be divorced from insanitary conditions, just as should the dining room, and life had for the visiting nurse of the Town and Country Nursing Service of the American Red Cross, in an important article on health conservation entitled, "Inspect the Premises of the Washerwomen," which appears in the March issue of the American Red Cross Magazine.
The pioneer efforts along this line of Greenville, S. C., as presented by Miss Babb, should command the attention of every Board of Health and city council in the United States. Greenville has an ordinance which requires all washerwomen to register, and obtain a license from the Board of Health before taking in washing. Inspections of washerwomen are made by the Red Cross, and preference is given to those using conditions, general sanitary condition of the premises, water supply and drainage, communicable diseases in the household, care in handling clothes, scrubbingboards, ironingboards, and other articles, and, in the case of the family must be reported promptly to the Board of Health. The license is withdrawn upon the failure of a holder to comply with all the provisions of the ordinance. A measure of more immense and practical value in the control of disease than the ordinance regulating washerwomen," declares Miss Babb. "I was sent to inspect the house and premises of one woman who had applied for washing and found her ironing and mangle freshly-ironed clothes on the bed, and her son, who had tuberculosis, lay."
"The remarkable and deplorable susceptibility of the negro population to tuberculosis, the rapidity with which they die of it, their bad housing conditions, the prevalence of malaria, and the presence of specific diseases, make this law imperative both for the protection of the white people; and it affords a splendid method of educating the colored population in the laws of health and sanitation."
"Miss Babb embellishes her interesting article with a number of amusing little stories of life among the negro washerwomen. She resorts at times to the use of dialect very entertainingly."
WILL NOT ACCEPT PUBLIC MONEY
Syracuse, N. Y., March 2.—The Right Rev. Bishop John Grimes, in a sermon here, declared that the Catholic church did not want public moneys for the support of parochial schools and would not accept such moneys if they were offered by the State. He said it would be a calamitous day for the parochial schools if they were supported by the State and dominated by State supervision.
CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT
Tower City, Pa., March 2.—Last January, when the State Inspector from Harrisburg examined the books of the Franklin Building and Loan Association, he found a deficiency and the secretary, H. T. Bressler, of Tower City, was suspected and expelled from office. An auditing committee was then appointed and the books thoroughly examined, which last week proved that a large amount of funds were missing. A warrant charging embezzlement was then sworn out before Judge Horn for the arrest of the secretary. He asserts that he can prove his innocence.

The railroads have greatly reduced their fares and made it possible for you to see both the San Francisco and San Diego Expositions on one ticket. By way of the Burlington Route (C. B. & Q. R. R.) the cost of a railroad ticket to California and back will be only about one-half the usual price, and you can take in the incomparable Colorado scenery including the Royal Gorge, see Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Salt Lake City on the way, stopping off at any point desired.
Returning, you may enjoy a sea trip up the coast to Portland, see Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane, and either Glacier National Park or Yellowstone Park—the wonders of the world.
You don't take a trip like this very often. You should see the best scenery en route and not spend any more than is necessary to do it. ### THE PETTICOAT HAS RETURNED TO FAVOR

A New Model Designed for Wear Beneath Fashionable Gowns.

By MAY MANTON

8555 Four Gored Petticoat, 24 to 34 waist.
No matter how long a time we may have given up petticoats, they are really dear to the feminine heart, and their return to favor is sure to be met with welcome. Here is one that is excellent for it is without unnecessary trimming, and allows a choice of flounces of three different sorts. For one use, the circular flounce will be the best, for another, the gathered flounce will be found perfect, and the plaited flounce makes the best possible finish for thin materials. In the illustration, the petticoat with circular flounce is made of messaline satin with trimming of heavy lace banding. One of the other views shows fine white cambric with flounce of embroidery, and another view shows crepe de chine with a plaited flounce. Since these are all desirable materials and the special flounce suits each one perfectly, the design is exceptionally useful. There is no fullness at the belt line.
For the medium size will be needed 5 yds. of material 27 in. wide, 2 1/2 yds. 36 or 44, with 2 yds. 27, 1 1/2 yds. 36 or 44 for the circular flounce; 2 yds. 27, 1 1/2 yds. 36, 1 yd. 44, for the plaited flounce, and 2 1/2 yds. embroidery 13 in. wide for the gathered flounce.
The pattern No. 8555 is cut in sizes from 24 to 34 in. waist measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

One less wholesale liquor dealer will do business in Dauphin county during the ensuing year, according to County Treasurer A. H. Bailey to-day.
James N. Reese, 109 South Second street, made application for release and the privilege was granted, but up until midnight, Saturday, the time limit for lifting the license, Reese had not appeared at the county treasurer's office to pay the necessary $500 fee.
