Release of Korean Christians Ends International Discussion

Japan Meets Expectations of Mission Leaders by Granting Pardon to Imprisoned Six

(By The Religious Rambler.)

A CASE that aroused the whole civilized world, and for a time imperiled the status of missions in the Japanese Empire, has been happily settled by the recent unconditional release of six Korean Christians, who were imprisoned in Seoul on the charge of conspiracy.

by came to be regarded as a roll of martyrs. The significant fact about the arrests was that they included chiefly the leaders of the Korean Christian church. One after another of the congregations' officials would be gathered in by the police, until some churches failed to elect elders.

Runaway June

By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester.

Copyright 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation.

"We are to have guests this evening," And Mrs. Villard studied June's height and figure with a calculating eye.

"Then you shall have them. My, what a pleasure it will be to make a dolly out of you, child! We must run right up and dress."

On the corner of Vander street and Duck alley was Ned, interviewing a skinny legged girl who sniffed continuously, both while she was pulling up her stockings and while she was not.

"What did that guy want?" he demanded. "He was astin' about a girl."

"Uh-huh—sawed off blond. Say, what is it to you?" And she sniffed away.

Officer Tierman walked back to his post with a troubled brow, and he shook his long, narrow head as he looked after the industrious Ned Warner.

CHAPTER III.

JUNE sprang suddenly from her little bench overlooking the river. Mrs. Grogg and her intolerable position persisted in jumping into June's mind and staying there.

"Sit down," And Mrs. Grogg gave up the unbroken chair. "Al's sleeping it off."

"I just ran in," observed the girl. "Yes. Tell Mrs. Villard that if Al gets home with any money tomorrow I'll save her out what I can."

"Oh, I didn't come about the rent," June returned. "I just ran in to see if there was anything I can do."

"No, there's nothing can be done. Al drank before I married him, and he drinks yet."

"Why does he have his own way about it?" "Because he's my husband. I'm scared of Al when he's drunk."

"And you're not afraid of him when he's sober?" "Well, no. There don't seem to be anything particular about Al to be scared of."

"The horror of drunkenness—that was it." "I wouldn't be afraid of him!" June suddenly popped out.

The woman looked at her with widened eyes. The door moved, and Al Grogg appeared in the doorway in his shirt sleeves, colorless, his hair tousled.

"What you got for supper?" he growled. "Why, Al—I-I didn't think you'd want any." And the woman's voice was trembling.

"Oh, you didn't think so! Well, I want some supper!" "Why, Al, I ain't got any money."

Do You Know that Railroad Expansion Makes Work and Stimulates Industry?

Money saved by the railroads flows back to the people. The $2,000,000 paid annually by the railroads of Pennsylvania and New Jersey to unnecessary trainmen, forced upon them by the Full Crew—or "excess man crew"—Laws, deprives the people of the big benefits and advantages this money, properly expended, would bring.

Because the efficient development of the railway industry in these States is so materially identified with the prosperity of the farmer, business man, working man, and scores of more or less affiliated industries, the railroads ask the people to help them save this huge amount—now absolutely wasted—that it may go to useful purposes and work toward restoration of general prosperity.

This $2,000,000 spent for 80 locomotives, for example, would make one year's work for 1745 men, as follows:

Table showing employment for various processes: In the locomotive shops (894), In the various processes of producing the 29,200,000 pounds of material going into these locomotives, 851 men would get employment as follows: In steel mills (206), In blast furnaces (45), In iron mines (140), In coal and coke production (60), In other work (400).

Wages for all these men would amount to $1,750,000. This wage money going into circulation would make work in hundreds of other directions.

Railroad development bears upon all industries. It affects hundreds of businesses, thousands of individuals. Under normal conditions, the railroads constitute a great constructive force. Increasing their facilities and improving their systems results in stimulating all industry and business and automatically creates work for innumerable persons in many occupations.

Increased industrial activity swells passenger and freight traffic. This means more trains and real work for additional crews. In turn, it necessitates more locomotives and cars, increased equipment, erection of new and remodeling of old stations, reduction of grades and curves, elimination of grade crossings, construction of sidings in producing territories, increased passenger and freight terminal facilities.

The welfare of the people and the prosperity of the railroads are closely linked. The railroads find their prosperity in the general welfare. They seek not to decrease, but to increase, employment.

Communicate in person, by letter, or otherwise—TODAY—with your elected representatives at Harrisburg and Trenton. Ask them to repeal the Full Crew Laws. Call attention to the fact that, of 282 editorials received to date, 229 urge the repeal of the laws.

Let all get together to start the wheels of industry turning—to open wide the doors to prosperity.

drooping of the eyes, the lowering of the fist, the drooping of the shoulders. And a small young woman in a fluffy evening gown had done this thing! Smash! A geranium pot just missed Al Grogg's head and broke on the bedroom door. Bang! Another spraddling geranium which had split down the center brushed Al's cheek as its pot crashed past.

"Looky here!" Al Grogg's tone was chiefly one of surprise. Other flowerpots followed from Mrs. Grogg's hands. She had at last discovered that Al Grogg could be made afraid.

June looked at her a moment and then trudged up the hill somewhat frightened at her own responsibility in this domestic upheaval. The guests had arrived when she reached the house. Tommy Thomas! With Tommy was a white mustached, pink faced man. The runaway bride was surprised and puzzled at the appearance of Tommy in this place, but the white mustached man occupied more of her thought. They were finishing dinner when Mrs. Villard was called away. The white mustached man was trying to induce June to smoke a cigarette.

Other Flowerpots Followed from Mrs. Grogg's Hands.

June suddenly looked up and saw in the doorway between the portieres of heavy velours the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye!

"Tut, tut, Orin!" came the suave voice of the black Vandyked man. "I won't have this little runaway bride taught bad habits."

June flushed and turned with some embarrassment to Mrs. Villard, who followed Blye into the doorway. Blye! Always Blye! He hovered about after they had lounged into the billiard room and conservatory, but the white mustached man monopolized June. Every time she tried to get away from him Tommy Thomas managed by some accident to throw them together again. June finally left the guests and went to her room. She had decided to go back to the O'Keefe's house of refuge.

Closer and closer had gathered the siege on the house of O'Keefe. Big bit atom by atom, traces had been picked up.

Closer and closer grew the tolls until Marie no longer dared stick her nose out of the window lest some one should report her to Ned or to June's father and mother. But Ned's detectives finally got definite information.

One day a long, lean slinker with cadaverous cheeks came up to Ned from Duck alley and looked up at the O'Keefe residence with solemn interest.

"That's the place," he said. "Yes; it's the place." Ned Warner's voice was hollow, but there was a jubilant ring in it. "Go and tell Mr. Moore."

The lean individual hurried away and presently came back on the driver seat of a limousine. Inside were the stern faced father and the gentle faced mother of June and June's bosom friend, the ebullient Iris Blethering, and Bobbie Blethering.

"This is the place," said stern John Moore, looking up at the narrow front of the O'Keefe residence, and, stalking out, he beckoned the others aught.

SPAIN SUFFERS FROM WAR

Bread and Meat Continue to Rise in Price; Working Classes Hard Hit

Madrid, via Paris, March 5, 1915. A. M.—Evidence that Spain is suffering more severely economically from the war than any country except the belligerents is contained in dispatches from different provincial centers. Notwithstanding drastic measures taken by the government to prevent monopolistic prices, the cost of food, especially bread and meat, continues to rise. The situation is felt most acutely by the working classes, already hard hit by the industrial stagnation resulting from the war.
