SUNDAY INTIMATES HE MAY COME HERE

Declares He Can Preach Sermon on Booze, but Cannot Make Political Speech

By Associated Press
Philadelphia, March 9.—Regarding the resolution of the New Jersey Legislature inviting him to address them next Monday and also referring to the movement at Harrisburg to have him come there to speak on local option, the Rev. W. A. Sunday, the evangelist, said to-day:
"I won't go to either place to make a political speech. My work is as a preacher and an evangelist. I am no politician. If they want me to point out why the sale of booze should be stopped and to point out its evils, I can preach a temperance sermon along those lines, but I don't care to attack parties or to make political speeches."

Taylor to Net $150 For City For Temporary Rental of Warehouse

Contractors who may want to build temporary storage houses or sheds in the River Front Park or on the island during the construction of the new Cumberland Valley bridge will have to pay an annual rental of $150 to the city, restore the ground to its original condition after it has been used, and file $5,000 bond to protect the city, according to an arrangement made today by City Commissioner M. Harvey Taylor, superintendent of parks and public property.

Several contractors have already written to Mr. Taylor asking for temporary space for a distance of 100 feet north and south of the bridge in the River Park and a distance of sixty feet north and south on the island. Because of the fact that the bridge job will mean work for hundreds of local men, Mr. Taylor said he believes the city should do all it can to accommodate the bridge contractors if the city is properly protected.
