The living models, thirty in number, were from the cast and chorus of "When Dreams Come True," and the costumes exhibited were those to be worn by the ladies in the production of "When Dreams Come True."
Tea gowns, ballroom gowns, street gowns, debutante gowns, schoolgirl gowns and just go the were displayed. "When Dreams Come True" will be vertisement.

CARLISLE ELKS' BIG FROLIC
The Carlisle Elks' Theatrical Association, which has been presenting a musical comedy entitled, "They're At It Again," to capacity audiences at the Carlisle Opera House the early half of this week, will open a two days' engagement at the Majestic Theater, in Harrisburg, to-morrow evening. Reports from Carlisle are to the effect that this year's show of the Elks is, by far, the best thing that they have ever attempted. If, for no other reason, the show would be well worth attending on account of the elaborate gowns worn by the female impersonators, but there are other reasons. The show is full of good comedy, bright songs and good dances.—Advertisement.

MAUDE ADAMS
In planning for the present season Maude Adams has determined that with her other plays she would make a revival of J. M. Barrie's early comedy, "Quality Street." She seemed to be exercising a great deal of care in the selection of the members of her company. When it was completed there was some surprise in noting its numerical strength. The extra people, who seem to be needed for "Quality Street." There is something more a part well; he must also look it and be temperamentally fit for it. The result of her care and judgment will be noted when she presents the play at the Majestic Friday evening, March 26. The play itself deals with people of a time long ago and it is quaint and whimsical with its sentiment daintily blended with humor that is charmingly Barresque.—Advertisement.

periodicals of the Antipodes as a cartoonist and writer, he thought he would try new fields, so he came to America. Bert at last found friends among the editors, and may be said to have "arrived." It was while doing cartoons on the New York Morning Telegraph (with which paper he is still connected) Mr. Levy conceived the idea of making a real stage production of caricature work by an invention whereby the cartoons could be thrown upon a huge screen during the process of drawing. He was many months perfecting the idea, but he won at last, and now he does a vaudeville "turn" that stands unique in the history of the varieties.—Advertisement.

COLONIAL
A clever miniature musical comedy called "The Song Doctors," that calls in a bevy of pretty girls, some good comedians, tuneful songs and delightful scenery, will lead the van of excitement at the Busy Corner during the last three days of the week. And it won't cost a fortune to consult these "doctors," either. Consultation and treatment is free, although they specialize as being "sure cures for the blues." On this same bill the Mosconi Brothers will present one of the best dancing exhibitions to be found in vaudeville; silver and Duval will present a rollicking comedy skit with music, and Jack Polk, the comedy monologist, will hand out a fine line of mirth and wit.—Advertisement.

REGENT TODAY
"Mrs. Haek Is Back," featuring May Irwin, will be shown at the "Regent" for the last time this afternoon and evening.
Friday "The Children of the Ghetto," by Israel Zangwill, will be shown. A story full of heart interest from beginning to end. "Wilton Lockes," the well-known Broadway star, is cast in the principal part, as "Reb Shenuel," a character that will live as long as

Popular Essanay player, Bryant Washburn, plays the lead to-day in a two-act Essanay drama, "The Strength of the Weak." This dramatic production, dealing with the curse of drink, is one well adapted to the ability of Bryant Washburn, for his portrayal of a wayward son is well acted. "The Tragedy of the Rails," a two-reel Edison drama, results in the rivalry of the engineer and the section boss for the hand of the girl telegraph operator. For five minutes, a race on the rail is portrayed which for tense interest has never been surpassed. Gertrude McCoy, Augustus Phillips and Carleton Kings plays the leading roles. Saturday Alice Joyce appears in a three-act feature, "The White Goddess." Miss Joyce does some wonderful work in this production and her costumes are beautiful.—Advertisement.
