PERSONAL SOCIAL

COME BACK TO ERIN IS CLEVER OPERETTA

Derry Street Young Folks Give Interesting Entertainment Last Evening

Leo MacDonald, of Carlisle Elk fame, Jesse Lasky, Roife and the rest of 'em haven't a thing on the ladies of Derry Street United Brethren Church, Fifteenth and Derry streets, when it comes to producing tuneful skits that drive away dull care. If you attended the social of the Derry Street Christian Endeavor Society last night, you know that this is true; if you didn't—well, you missed a treat, that's all.

"Come Back to Erin" was the name of a little Irish operetta, planned and staged under the direction of Miss Miriam Carl and Mrs. C. L. Shepley. The lassies were dressed as colleens; the men as Irish lads, with green sash, b'zorry and all. Thomas B. Lyter sang the leading role as sure 'n' he did it mightily well. Harold Gilbert read "Where the River Shannon Flows" with piano accompaniment, played by Mrs. Shepley. In the chorus were the Misses Stella Ulrich, Margaret Helkes, Anna Bauder, Vera Harman, Mabel Bright, Kathleen Robinson, Katharine Carl, Roger Harman, Ross Harman, Harold Gilbert and Thomas Lyter.

All the old Irish songs were sung from "O' Wearin' O' the Green" to the "Last Rose of Summer."

Miss Alfarata Horting, 504 Rely street, left yesterday after a short visit to Duncannon and Newport.

HEARTY APPLAUSE GIVEN LUCY MARSH

Famous Singer Graciously Responds to Encore After Encore at Benefit Concert

With a voice of silvery quality, a perfectly even scale and an impeccable intonation, with an agility and perfection in coloratura singing, obtained only by such famous singers of this generation as Sembrich and Hempel, Lucy Marsh with her gracious manner and personality proved herself to be the really great artist, the like of whose singing has not been heard here since the day of Nordica. No less astonishing was her versatility, for her French, German and English songs, sung with admirable textual enunciation, and displaying an emotionally suggestive, highly discriminating interpretative capacity showed her to be no less great and inspiring "leader" singer. Although of American training, Mme. Marsh had the good taste not to perpetrate the banality of singing that beloved war horse of the prima donna—the "Fors' e lui," from Traviata, which opened the recital, nor yet her French and German songs in English to the utter rout of diction and correct phrasing. Her "Fors' e lui," more than a word, too, must be said for Newell Albright's masterly and discriminating accompaniments. A very interesting was Mme. Marsh's treatment of the Vidal "Ariette," with its fascinating quintuple rhythm, as well as the breadth and sentiment displayed in the Strauss Dedication and the two Grieg songs, a dream and the sunshine song. Exquisite was the interpretation of Leon's Birth of Mori and the Sylveln of Sinding and the splendid sweep of Woodman's "A Birthday" with which the recital closed. Most generous too were the encores—no less than four, all well known favorites of her Victor records—with which she responded to the enthusiastic and unmistakably appreciative, if disgraced, small audience. More than a word, too, must be said for Newell Albright's masterly and discriminating accompaniments. A proof that he unmistakably has that rare sense, possessed by so few concert pianists, of creating just the right musical atmosphere for a singer, was her own enthusiastic comment—that highest compliment a singer can pay—that she was so much at her ease as to be able to completely forget there was such a thing as an accompaniment.

EYE CARE No. 14

A Series by J. S. Belsinger

The examining of the eyes does not complete the work of giving you eye comfort. Grinding the lenses, and adjusting them to your eyes is an equally important part of that comfort.

Careful, efficient work in both of these capacities which leave the patient with optically perfect eyes, is the paramount feature of the Belsinger optical service.

Glasses at prices everyone can afford.
