PUBLIC HEARING ON LOCAL OPTION BILL

urally desire to express them. When he was asked about another hearing on the child labor bills he said that was "up to the committees."

The Governor declared that he had no appointment to meet William Flinn as rumored about the Capitol. "I do not know that he is coming here, and, do you know, I have never met Mr. Flinn," said the Executive. It was reported several times to-day that Flinn was in the city and intended to call on the Governor to discuss local option and workmen's compensation.

Will Meet Governor
The legislative committee named to have charge of the Republican platform bills in the general assembly will meet with Governor Brumbaugh to-night at 7:30. Governor Brumbaugh said to-day in making the announcement: "We will discuss workmen's compensation and child labor and, possibly, local option."

The meeting will be held prior to the meeting of the two houses for another week's work during which there will be several big hearings.

Records of the Governor's office show that since he became the chief executive 26,000 letters have been sent out in reply to communications received and in acknowledgment of letters. "We asked for suggestions from the people and they are telling us," remarked the Governor to-day. The office does not attempt to acknowledge all petitions except where addresses are given by the actual senders. The record of correspondence is greater than ever known.

WIFE BIT HIM, HIT HIM, GUFFED HIM

Dashes Dishes Over His Head and Swats Him With a Lamp

In the offices of Steelton 'squires from time to time many a tale's been told of what happens when a neglectful husband comes home late at night to meet his teeming, remonstrating wife. But this is the story of what happened when Mrs. Charles Chaney, 54 Lochiel Row, wife of Charles Chaney, came home.

It was one evening last week, according to the story Charles Chaney, the husband, told the squire between the threatening interruptions of his buxom spouse, that he was sitting at the supper table, patiently awaiting the return of Mrs. Chaney.

That he had been waiting a long, long time was evident, he says, because he had lighted a lamp and placed it in the center of the table. Finally Mrs. Chaney returned, removed her raps and sat down to the delayed evening meal.

Timidly, the husband says, he remonstrated at her long absence and plead with her to put an end to her frequent unexplained visits away from the house. In silence, he related, his wife listened.

Mistaking her silence for repentance, Chaney told the squire, his exostulations grew stronger and he demanded to be treated as a good, faithful husband should be treated.

But Chaney discovered his mistake — AFTER the lamp had inflicted a deep gash in his forehead, he declared, and AFTER most of the supper dishes had been shattered in pieces within inches of his head, and AFTER his "repentant" spouse had bit him in both arms. To the office of Squire Gardner Chaney limped to tell the tale of his little domestic tragedy, and to appeal for protection. After Detective I. N. Chubb's hurried investigation, however, — had rounded up the militant spouse, she was arraigned before Squire Gardner.

The husband appeared against her much resembling a battle-scarred veteran of the wars.

And Squire Gardner sympathized with him to the extent of committing Mrs. Chaney to jail after she failed to furnish bail.

There's an Honest Man in Middletown, You Old Cynic— Here's the Proof

William Shaner is a man of his word. Burgess Fred Wigfield, Chief of Police H. P. Longaker and Borough Secretary C. P. Feidt, will all vouch for that.

And this is why: Shaner comes from Middletown and is a painter, he says. For months, he declared, he was out of work until last week when he secured employment in Steelton. And he thought he'd just celebrate a little when he drew his first pay. So he looked upon the wine when it was red, the police say.

He fell into the hands of Chief of Police Longaker, who took him before Burgess Wigfield to answer a disorderly conduct charge. Repentant, the painter told a story of his wife and daughter, whom he says, are dependant upon him. He was without money, he declared, and asked the burgess to "trust" him to return and pay the $3 fine and costs that were imposed.

"I'll take your word," said the burgess, as he released him from custody.

"Good-by $3," soliloquized the chief of police.

But Shaner came back with the coin.

Claire Rochester at the Orpheum This Week

Claire Rochester, who will appear at the Orpheum this week, is the only vocalist in the world who can sing the quartet from "Rigoletto" all by herself. Miss Rochester is not only the possessor of a marvelous soprano voice of a great range and sweetness, but she also has a powerful baritone such as few male singers can boast of. Miss Rochester's soprano voice has a range to F above high C (the note they used to advertise as Ellen Beach Yaws high note) and the baritone runs where it is claimed no baritone out of grand opera dare treat, namely, to high C.—Advertisement.
