Recently March 29 was named as the day for the annual inspection of the city schools. The girls at Central high immediately decided to extend an invitation to the directors to come to the domestic science kitchen for their noonday meal. As a result mine houngry and happy men eagerly wended their way to the basement of the school to-day to sample the coching of the girls, who were busy all morning "getting ready." Miss Frances Hamilton, instructor, supervised the plans, but let the girls do the work. And the directors turned in a unanimous decision that those girls can't be beaten.

In the party were Harry A. Boyer, president of the board; F. E. Downes, superintendent of city schools; D. D. Hammelbaugh, secretary; William A. Boll. Adam D. Houtz, Millard F. Saul, Harry M. Bretz, George W. Kennedy and the Rev. William N. Yates. The party visited nearly every school in the city and received reports from the principals regarding accommodations and repairing needed.
