Runaway June

By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester.

Copyright 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation.

After that the entries were all in dollars. On the "From" side they were chiefly the wages of Percy Wilkins and Sally Fish Wilkins, for they had apparently gone into private service immediately. On the "To" side, which represented the expenditures, there were very few entries, but they were interesting. In the four years the woman had had four cheap dresses besides her uniforms and very scant accessories. The last entry among the receipts was June's $14 under the head "Tips." On that page the book showed an item, "Banked to the credit of P. Wilkins, $12,000."

And it all belonged to the man, every penny. If the woman had anything it was a gift, no matter what she brought to the man on her marriage nor what she had earned since! It seemed universal, this condition.

A startling thought came to June. Suppose she achieved her independence, suppose she earned her own money, so that she could go to Ned, asking from him nothing but love in return for her love, would she own what she had earned? If so, what would become of the principle for which she had run away? She paled at that thought, and then she laughed. She did not know the law in this matter, but she knew Ned. Dear Ned! She hunted her handkerchief in a hurry.

CHAPTER III.

THE arrival of an envelope by messenger rendered unnecessary the immediate need of police aid for the Moore family. With fingers which trembled in spite of his habitual control, the father of June opened the telegram and read this strange message:

Swiftly, silently, June Gained the Deck.

Flash the lonely overcoat and cap pursued their almost imperceptible way. A touring car stopped on the street up the hill.

"It is cold, my friend, is it not?" called Henri as he rushed forward, bottle in hand. "Shall we warm ourselves?"

"Yes," rolled up the somber voice, with frosty cordiality, and the neck of the bottle disappeared in the slit of the overcoat collar.

"The motor tender from the Hilarity—it is not yet returned, eh?"

"Nope."

"Volle!" Henri is even cheerful as he races back up the dock. "I shall return, my friend Monsieur Frappe."

As Henri jumps into his car a dim, fat figure slinks out of the shadows and hops on behind.

Left alone momentarily, June threw open the door which she had just locked and dashed back along the gangway toward the pantry. At the end of the passage she found a companionway which led her up to the deck. She rushed forward to the prow, taking in at a glance that they were far from shore and in the open water. The distant lights glowed dully through the mist, but just ahead of her, on the port side, bore down the red and green lights of a tug.

"Aho!" she cried, lifting her hands to her mouth like a megaphone. "Aho!" she screamed.

Strong arms seized her—the heavy jawed officer she had seen as she had come on board. Two others came running up, Edwards and Cunningham. Close behind were Tommy Thomas and Mrs. Villard, the former laughing, the latter panic stricken. A handkerchief was pressed against her mouth, and the tug flashed by.

It was Edwards and Cunningham who dragged June down into the crimson and gold salon, and as June was jostled in the first thing she saw was the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye! He was standing at the portabie buffet, quietly drinking a glass of wine!

P. Wilkins and wife came running in, and Edwards, panting, his heavy lips parted in a half snarl and half grin, released his hold on June.

"Lock her up," he ordered and joined Blye at the buffet. Blye lifted his glass, suavely smiling, as June, now unresisting, was led away.

Inside her stateroom June locked her door and at the same time heard it booted from the outside.

On the dock the overcoat and cap watched the figure of Henri with drowsy interest; also a short, thick figure.

"Say, what do they want?" the short, thick figure asked, with stiff lips.

"Didn't I tell you before to hike?" husked the warm steam of breath. "Get off the dock."

"The beautiful little motorboat!" interrupted Henri, with ingratiating enthusiasm. "My friend M. Flambeau, would it not be possible?"

"Nope."

"Volle!" Henri was quite cheerful. "I shall return again, my friend Frappe."

Henri was just starting his car and the short, thick figure had just stunk out of the shadows to hop on behind when the overcoat and cap sat on the edge of the dock, with their feet dangling toward the water.

"Ah!" breathed Henri to the stiff figure beside him. "At last it arrives! We shall wait!"

"Is there any left?" husked a voice.

"Pardon," abjectly apologized Henri, "a thousand pardons, Mlle. Marie!" And he produced a fresh bottle.

The thick, short figure slinking back into the shadows wiped its lips with its tongue and shivered.

Dawn—slowly the chill, gray mist which lay upon the river began to clear.

"Volle," cracked the voice of Henri, but the tone was cheerful still. "He sleeps!"

It was true. The overcoat and cap, after bobbing and swaying dangerously over the water's edge for hour after hour, had at last stretched out on the dock for the slumber due to a night watchman who was thoroughly at ease and thoroughly warm.

Henri and Marie, with all the mental effect of stealthiness, sprang into the swift looking little motorboat.

A short, thick figure came painfully waddling out on the dock and shook the overcoat. The cap wobbled.

Paving of Camp Hill's Main Street Planned by Council

Special to The Telegraph

Camp Hill, Pa., April 2.—Camp Hill will have Market street paved if plans of council work out. An ordinance has been drawn up providing for an increase in the borough debt, the money to be used in paving. The bill will come up for first reading Thursday night. Council will ask to increase the borough debt $45,000 and a special election will be held within a few months.

The paving of Market street from Cumberland street on the east side of town to Hampden township line on the west side with either brick or asphalt paving, a distance of one and one-half miles, will cost in the neighborhood of $80,000. The State will be asked by the council to pay for the paving of eight feet. The Valley Railway Company will be asked to pay for the paving of seven feet to cover their roadbed. As Market street is twenty-four feet in width, nine feet remains to the town and property holders to pay for.

HARRISBURG AND EVERYWHERE

There is no after-glow

When you blow out a Safe Home match, it is OUT. And it stays out.

Every Safe Home match is chemically treated to prevent after-glow.

Safe Home matches are extra long and extra strong.

The extra length means extra service. With one Safe Home match you can light all four burners of a gas stove—and not run the risk of burning your fingers.

The extra strength means extra safety. Other things being equal, that match is safest which is strongest. Safe Home matches are strongest.

Examine the head of a Safe Home match. It is nearly twice as large as that of an ordinary match. That means better burning—a bigger flame, an even flame, a flame that burns longest.

Safe Home matches are non-poisonous. They are safe to have in the home.
