Chinese Christians Appeal to American Churches Against Japan

A New Use Found For Missionary Tie in International Affairs; Missionaries Also Bring Message

(By The Religious Rambler.)

WHETHER a new era in democratic diplomacy is opening or not, certainly the power of a common international Christian sentiment is being dramatically illustrated to-day by the Chinese Christians and their American friends.

Chinese Christians have sent a letter of appeal to the Christians of America, asking them to influence the American Government to protect China from aggression in her present need. The Chinese members of the Washington Y. M. C. A. have issued a formal letter to President Wilson to the same effect.

Bishop J. W. Bashford, of the Methodist Church, has sailed from China for America, bearing a kindred appeal.

Other Chinese missionaries already in this country are at work voicing the call of China to America. The studentism with the growth of a spirit of sensitiveness and militant patriotism.

No thoughtful person misses the point of the fact that these aroused Chinese Christians turn for succor instinctively to America, the land which has given them most of their missionaries and teachers, and which they say is the one nation that has shown a distinctively Christian spirit in seeking to serve the welfare of the Chinese people.

The Missionaries' Part

All China is in a panic at the present time. It sees visions of the loss of empire through the Japanese demands. The whole nation is in a state of fear and hysteria and clamor. Not only the Christians, but the officials have turned straightway to the American missionaries for counsel and cooperation and comfort.

Many of the missionaries have written to papers in the Chinese treaty ports, as well as in America, espousing the Chinese cause, and calling upon the American Government to sever its good offices vigorously in behalf of China. Not all of these letters have been discreet, and Secretary Bryan has vigorously reprimanded the missionaries for a participation in international politics.

The missionary boards are more cautious than their representatives. At least one of the men, at home on furlough from the port of Shantung which the Japanese have taken over, has been addressing American audiences, and his restrictions upon Japan's course have earned him a written reprimand from his board. This particular man has had his house looted and his property destroyed by the invaders, and perhaps he may be forgiven for appealing warmly upon the subject, although his speeches are in behalf of the Chinese Christians.

Other missionaries are openly and avowedly seeking to serve China in this her crisis. They say that the traditional friendship of China for America is imperiled at the present time. Most of these men, however, are working quietly, because they realize the delicacy of a situation that involves three great nations.

Using Missions For National Propaganda

The formal use of the missionary enterprise for national political purposes is nothing new. America has steadfastly held aloof from it, and what missionaries have done for the promotion of American prestige has been done in an entirely individual and unauthorized fashion.

The European nations have not always adopted this policy of separation of statecraft from missionary activities. Thus it was the death of two German missionaries in Shantung that led Germany to make the demands upon China which gave her the concessions that the Japanese have lately seized. France also has always made an official matter of her foreign missions. Russia and Italy have done the same.

From the first, Japan has been keen to see the important part that the missionaries may have in shaping public opinion, both at home and abroad. The Japanese Government has freely recognized and decorated missionary leaders. She has invited and welcomed deputations of Americans interested in missions, and many of the religious papers and peace organizations have been heartily enlisted on the side of Japan, because of the sympathetic interpretation of Japan's objectives, which they have gained through the missionary contact. It has been said that Japan could afford to pay the bills of the American missionaries working within her borders, because of the service that has been rendered her in this country by the missionaries and friends of missions. Japanese churchmen have been sent abroad, with government support, to represent Japan's case in the West.

Innumerable religious and educational deputations have been exchanged between Japan and America.

China has not been alert in thus officially furthering and utilizing the friendship of her missionaries as propagandists.

A few years ago an effort was made to secure the presence of Colonel Roosevelt as a visitor to China, as a guest of the Chinese Government, the expectation being that he would get a hearing for China's cause with the American public. Tentative overtures were made to the American State Department during Secretary Knox's regime, but the Chinese officials said that they were not encouraged to pursue their project.

Now, however, the whole case is assuming a new front. Perhaps the successful plea of the Korean Christians to the Christians of America, when they were in peril, has quickened the zeal of the Chinese Christians in calling upon their fellow Christians in America for practical fellowship in this hour of trial.

KAISER'S AMBITION

As a boy, the Kaiser was the favorite grandchild of Queen Victoria, and when on his visits to England, his favorite haunts were the Portsmouth dockyards. He received many honors on his accession to power, but none delighted him so much as the Queen's act in creating him an admiral of the British fleet. No German suffered greater humiliation than the Kaiser at the wretched showing made by German warships in comparison with those of other Powers at the naval display which opened the Kiel Canal in 1895. Again, when the British fleet, in the South African war, "held up" several German vessels which were attempting to carry on trade with the Boers, none was quite so furious as the Emperor—furious because the overwhelming naval power of England made it impossible to do anything except to swallow the insult—April "World's Work."

Don't Say, "I Want a Box of Matches"

"Would you go into a grocery store and say, 'Give me a cake of soap?'"

No! You would ask—by name—for the kind of soap that is best adapted to your needs.

So with breakfast foods. You would ask—by name—for the kind that has the pleasantest taste or is most nourishing.

Follow this rule with matches. Tell the grocer you want Safe Home Matches.

If you ask for "matches," goodness knows what you may get.

5c. All grocers. Ask for them by name.

Florida Oranges and Grapefruit Ripened Under Nature's Smiles

Citrus fruits came first to Florida of all America—were the heritage of the State from its Spanish discoverer. In no part of the world have oranges and grapefruit attained the perfection they have reached in their adopted "Land of Flowers." The soil and sunshine—the ocean breezes and summer showers—develop and ripen the fruit in Florida as nowhere else.

The progressive fruit growers of Florida have a co-operative organization for mutual protection of themselves and consumers.

FLORIDA

Bought in boxes on which the above mark is branded in red, Florida oranges and grapefruit will be found heavy with juice, delightfully sweet and delicately flavored. In season Florida Citrus Exchange fruit can be secured from most dealers—yours will get it for you if you insist.

There are many ways of serving oranges and grapefruit. Booklet containing scores of recipes for the use of citrus fruits mailed for 4 cents in stamps. Address Florida Citrus Exchange, 628 Citizens' Bank Bldg., Tampa, Fla.
