PENROSE PREDICTS BIG G. O. P. VICTORY

Washington by representatives of the Treasury and Commerce Departments to the effect that the country was sweeping forward to prosperity and permanent trade betterment, as evidenced in the reports of national bank examiners, Senator Penrose attacked the Wilson administration for a prosperity "based on European war orders," and entered a general denial of the data compiled by Secretaries McAdoo and Redfield.

HARMONY PREDICTION

Asked to comment on reports from Washington that ex-Secretary of State Knox was a likely candidate, Senator Penrose merely said Mr. Knox was the choice of the Pennsylvania delegation at the last convention. Then he launched into his view that complete harmony would again be restored between the Republicans and the Bull Moose.

"It is very evident that the Progressives, so called, are coming back to the Pennsylvania and elsewhere demonstrated that they would continue to come back in increasing numbers. The mistakes and misunderstandings of the past will be forgotten and the party will again be harmonious and reunited."

CRITICISES BUSINESS REPORTS

Asserting that trade reports from Washington were without foundation, Senator Penrose said business would continue to grow worse as long as the "underwood" tariff stood, and that the only business relief hinged on the election next year. With a newspaper account of the Washington officials' statements before him, Senator Penrose said:

"The press agent reports from time to time by heads of the Treasury and Commerce Departments about improvement in business conditions are absolutely without foundation. About the only actual facts that can be given in these statements are contracts for munitions of war by foreign governments. A business prosperity based upon such foundations surely does not constitute a very valid argument in favor of Democratic policies."

"A party that can only vindicate itself because a war is going on in Europe will have to readjust its issues when that war ceases. The fact of the matter is, if free trade policies of the government had not been mitigated by war in its effects, the industrial depression in the United States would be many times greater than it is, and the Republican tidal wave would have fairly swept over the country last November, submerging every vestige of Democracy."

"These war orders are, of course, temporary, limited and in many cases only keep a mill open for a few weeks. Certainly no business man would expect any permanency of business from such conditions. As a matter of fact, importation of manufactured goods from Europe is much greater than is generally supposed and there is no business in the United States since the enactment of the Underwood tariff law and other harassing legislation."

"It is natural for business men, in public utterances, to express optimism. No one wants to own publicly that his business is on the verge of bankruptcy. It is, however, well known to every one who cares to know the facts and who is in a position to get them that business is going to go steadily from bad to worse under the present administration, and that no hope of improvement of any kind can be held out until the people record their verdict in 1916 in favor of sanity toward business, fairness toward the railroads, a protective policy and Republican policies in general, together with the election of a Republican President and a majority in both branches of Congress."
