MISS GRACE POTTER GIVES RECITAL HERE

Celebrated Pianiste Will Appear at Technical High Auditorium Tuesday, April 27

The announcement that Miss Grace Stewart Potter, the celebrated pianiste, will give a recital in this city on April 27 has aroused more than the usual interest in musical circles and the Technical high school auditorium will probably have a capacity audience for the occasion.

Miss Potter, who returned from Europe at the outbreak of the war, is now one of the instructors at Bush Conservatory, Chicago. She will play a recital at the White House early in May and has many engagements between Chicago and Washington.

Press notices from both this country and abroad are most flattering, the Music News saying: "The great public will learn to know Grace Potter intimately beyond a doubt, for she is a pianiste of infinite charm; a poet—and her music partakes of a like character. She has power sufficient for all needs and can play with decided dramatic force, when she wishes."

Mrs. Henry Blake Bent, of 207 State street, has gone to Baltimore for a little visit with Miss Sara Poe.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Emerson, Jr., of 1017 North Front street, are home after a trip to Beloit, Wis., where they attended the Emerson-Adams wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scott Hall, of 1206 North Fifteenth street, are spending ten days at Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia.

DAFFODIL LUNCHEON
Appointments of yellow and white with a large crystal bowl of daffodils as a centerpiece gave a Spring-time look to the table for Miss Marie Gable's luncheon this afternoon to her guest, Miss Jeanne Farrar, of Philadelphia. Eight young girls attended and cards followed the luncheon.

Runaway June

By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester.

"Got him!" he triumphantly yelled. "Say, listen. I just done a fine piece of work. I sleuthed the other party's detectives. They got the girl's dog, and they've spotted your husband's limousine. Join me in front of the Blakely building and I'll lead you to them."

At the same moment Ned's detectives were telephoning the same information to the anxious group in the Warner apartments.

"Didn't I tell you we'd find a clew?" exclaimed Iris Bletchering and sobbed to relieve her feelings.

The little runaway bride was a picture which would have held the eye of any artist as she lay asleep in the lognook with the flare of the flames dancing about her. The filmy negligee had slipped from one shoulder, and her pretty head, with the way hair rippling back from her brow, rested upon a tapering white arm. She suddenly awoke under Durban's gaze and drew the negligee in place.

"You've spoiled it!" cried Durban. "My Spirit of the Marsh! Come here!" He caught her hand and raised her. He led her, bewildered, before the big canvas, where, crudely indicated by a few rough strokes of the crayon, the "Spirit of the Marsh" hovered over her domain.

"You must be my model!" he excitedly informed her. "I will pay you any price you wish. Here is some money in advance." And, jerking a wad of loose bills from his pocket, he thrust them in her hand. "Now stand here!" He was so quick, so energetic, so fired with impatient fervor, that June had no time to think, much less protest. He half led, half pulled, her on the small dais which he hastily shoved into position. He caught up a sharp knife. It would not do. He ran to a workbasket in the alcove and brought back a long pair of shears and with one clip slit the filmy negligee at the shoulder.

At that moment the portieres opposite the big canvas opened far enough to reveal the dark, handsome face of the black Vandyke Gilbert Blye.

Toward the Durban house there dashed two automobiles, the electric of Honoria Blye and the Moore family car, with the parents and husband of June and her bosom friend, Iris Bletchering, and Bobbie.

Marie and Officer Dowd were suddenly interrupted in their leisurely stroll by a loud yelp, and a white and brown streak threw itself against Marie. Bouncer! He barked, he circled, he ran up the street a little way, ran back and darted off again.

"Miss June!" cried Marie, and, clutching Officer Dowd by the sleeve, she ran up the street after the dog.

Vivian Durban, her chin tilted, her face serene, her step deliberate and leisurely, came into her studio. Whatever she had been about to say froze on her lips as she saw the tableau before her. The canvas, the exquisitely molded runaway bride, draped like the Spirit of the Marsh, stood upon the dais.

"Oh!" The word was a shriek. Vivian Durban rushed down the length of the studio, towering with rage. "So that's it!" she cried. "That's why you brought this creature here!"

"Viv!" protested the artist. "Out of my house!" the woman screamed at June, her fingers working convulsively. "Out of my house this minute!" And she started toward the frightened June.

"Here!" Bennett Durban caught his wife's arm and held her back. She stopped, and slowly her chin went up. She turned on him coldly. "Either that creature leaves—goes instantly—or you go! This is my house!"

With a low cry June had darted across the studio, clasping her gauzy draperies about her as best she could. In the hall she turned to dart up the stairs, where her clothes had been left. "Out of my house!" sternly called the woman, and as June stopped, bewildered, half crazed, the front door was opened by the smirking butler, whose furtive eye leered at her.

Faint, dazed, scarce knowing what she did, June, draped as the Spirit of the Marsh, slipped out of the house and into the street.

The artist and his wife went to the porch and watched the girl fluter away. The woman turned to Durban. "You're in love with her," she snapped. Around the corner, two blocks away, tore the Moore car, with Ned Warner peering intently ahead. From the opposite direction came Honoria Blye's electric. In front of the Durban door stood a luxurious limousine with the black shades drawn. Gilbert Blye's.

As June dashed down the steps the door of the car opened and the white mustached Orin Cunningham sprang out and caught June by the wrist. Another figure sped from the Durban door, close upon the beautiful Spirit of the Marsh. It was Gilbert Blye, and he held outstretched a voluminous black cloak.
