GERMANS ABANDON PLAN FOR GENERAL OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT IN FRANCE

Austrian and German Forces Decide to Concentrate Energies on Eastern Front; Artillery to Be Transferred From Verdun to Poland; Spain Ready to Show Her Sympathies Lie With Triple Entente

Abandonment by the German general staff of plans for a general offensive in France is inferred in Rome from information received there. It is said this decision is indicated by official communications to the Italian cabinet as well as by statements of Germans in official circles and that hope of penetration farther into French territory has been put aside.

A dispatch from Geneva gives the impression that the Austrians and Germans have decided to concentrate their energies on the eastern campaign. It is said that at a council of war, presided over by Field Marshal von Hindenberg, it was determined to transfer the Austrian heavy artillery now before Verdun to Poland and to send back to Cracow, Western Galicia, the Hungarian cavalry now on the western front.

The situation in the east is still to be cleared up. Confident assertions from Berlin last week that the Russian advance in the Carpathian region had been halted are offset by the claim of the Petrograd war office that the principal chain of the mountains, comprising a 75-mile section of the front, is now in possession of the Russians and that 70,000 Austrians have been captured in the last few weeks. It is said in Petrograd that the movement toward the interior of Hungary will be resumed after the troops have been rested and reinforced. The Austrian war office, however, maintains that the Austro-German forces are gaining further victories.

Count Alvaro de Romanones, former premier of Spain, has made a public statement that "a solemn declaration" had been made by Spain to show where her sympathies lie in the war without violating her neutrality. He pointed out that Spain's relations with the triple entente, consisting of Great Britain, France and Russia, had been more and more friendly during recent years.
