"Their Married Life"

"And for heaven's sake, don't be late whatever you do," admonished Warren as he left Helen standing on a corner of the crooked street. They had come to Panama City early that morning, and as Warren had some business in Balboa he had agreed to leave Helen in Panama City to shop.

Helen walked slowly down the street, stopping every now and then to examine the different shop windows. The shops in Panama City were much more Americanized than those in Colon, and Helen needed several things she had not been able to purchase in Colon.

With a glance at her watch she saw that she had nearly three hours till train time and she went on her errands accordingly, taking plenty of time to look at things as she walked from shop to shop.

She needed a couple of fresh shirt-waists and selected some very pretty ones in one of the shops when she saw some pretty hats. One, a little white one, swirled with white wings, was very smart, and Helen asked the man to take it out of the case for her. The price was more than she had wanted to pay, and she did not really need the hat, but then she had not bought a Panama hat and these were much more expensive than they were in the city, and so felt entitled to a hat of some kind.

"I didn't want to pay that much," she explained to the man who was waiting on her.

"But it is worth it, madam; genuine hemp and faced with velvet."

So it was. Helen had not noticed that before she had bought the hat she would try it on. She pulled off her little blue suit hat and tried on the white one. It really was becoming, but she hesitated, she really hated to be extravagant.

"All right, I'll take it," she said after a few seconds of doubt, and she waited while the man made a neat package of some other purchases she had made, wrapping them all up together.

She was a little hungry and wondered if she had time to go up to the hotel for some breakfast. They had eaten so early and some hot coffee would taste good.

She ordered a bountiful breakfast at Lesuire.

On the way up to the hotel she decided that she had about an hour to eat, certainly plenty of time, and she ordered a bountiful breakfast in the great cool dining room, scrambled eggs and rolls and coffee, and some pancakes and maple syrup.

She smiled a little as she thought what Warren would say if he could see her, and then she proceeded with her breakfast with a good appetite. Everything was delicious and she ate as though she had had nothing at all that morning. By the time she was ready to leave the hotel she still had three-quarters of an hour till the time Warren had asked her to meet him, and she decided to go back down town and buy some silk stockings.

The carriage drove her down slowly and when she came out she halted another one to drive down to the station. The horse acted very peculiarly as she was about to climb into the carriage, and after they had started he began to kick and finally refused to go at all.

Helen sat still a moment, and then informed the driver that she had to catch a train and would have to call another carriage. The driver objected strenuously as she climbed down, but she paid no attention to him, and as there were plenty of cabs in the street, she was soon in another one hurrying to the station. But the first driver, who had finally induced his horse to go, was after them in a minute and almost before she knew it, Helen found herself stopped by one of the mounted native police while the coacher told the story in some kind of patois.

"Let me explain," said Helen finally and the man turned to her willingly enough. The story seemed to satisfy him, but the driver demanded his money grudgingly.

"But I won't pay him," Helen protested. "I didn't drive more than a few feet in his carriage."

"There was some more altercation and finally Helen was allowed to drive off.

Warren Waiting a Picture of Disgust

"Do you think we can make it," she said imploringly to the driver, who merely whipped up his horse. But just as they rounded the corner, the train pulled out of the station.

Warren was standing on the platform, his face a picture of disgust, and, to make matters worse, a second later the driver with the emaciated horse appeared upon the scene with another attempt to get his money.

"I've missed the train," Helen explained you know that," Warren said furiously. "I said in the beginning it was a fool stunt shopping in Panama."

"But, dear," said Helen, trying to explain, "I suppose if there hadn't been one till to-morrow, you would have missed it just the same."

"But so would you, dear," said Helen, sweetly, "you admitted it just now." And Warren grimaced as he pulled out a cigar and lighted it.

Another incident in this series will appear here soon.)

"GERMAN POLICE," DECLARE ALDERMEN

Lower Executives Tell of Improvement in Morals of City; "Nothing to Do," They Reiterate

Recent lack of criminal cases in aldermanic circles in this city has caused much comment among justices in the thirteen wards.

Two aldermen who handle a majority of cases in the city, report a lack of work that is startling compared to the number of cases several years ago. In practically every office, discussions of the war, baseball, local option, full crew repeal, and other current topics have taken the place of swearing in witnesses for preliminary hearings.

Alderman Bayles, of the Seventh ward, remarked several days ago that "Harrisburg either has gotten some good from Dr. Stough, or that booze holsters are cutting down," and Petty cases of assault and battery, and trifling larcenies, are only occasionally being heard.

George A. Hoever, of the Ninth ward, declared that the town must be getting good. "Nothing doing criminally," is the first thing Alderman Caveny says when asked about his work.

"Constables, too, are idle. Sitting back in their chairs, with little or no work on hand, aldermen and constables are waiting—just to see if this thing will last," Alderman Hilton termed it.

MCINTYRE AND HEATH IN "THE HAM TREE"

Mr. Wayburn selected the chorus for this production from over 1,000 applicants, and he is authority for the statement that the girls are among the best, jig, soft-shoe and break-down dancers in the world. McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree" will be the attraction at the Majestic, Friday, afternoon and evening. Seats will go on sale to-morrow.—Advertisement.

"TWIN BEDS"
George Drew Mendum—yes, she is a member of the famous Drew family—simply revels in the comedy of Nora, the Irish nursemaid, who is the Hawkins menage. Miss Mayo, author of "Twin Beds," has given Nora some of the wittiest and most original lines in every one of them, and as Miss Drew plays opposite to clever Marion Lord, not a scene or a laugh is lost. "Twin Beds" returns to the Majestic Friday, April 30.—Advertisement.

FUN TONIGHT AT COLONIAL
This is the weekly Country Store night at the Colonial Theater, and the management has planned some comedy surprises that are sure to give the most of the season. One of the acts slated for the new bill is the biggest act ever presented at the Colonial Theater. "The Bachelor Dinner" is a big girl act of the musical comedy variety, with more than a dozen players in the cast, seven of them charming young women with a wealth of wardrobe and beautiful changes. There will be three other good acts on the same bill.—Advertisement.

ROMAINE FIELDING AT PHOTOPLAY TODAY
The ideal man of the West, Romaine Fielding, comes to the Photoplay today in a splendid Lubin two-act production, "Mr. Carlson of Arizona." No one is more fitted to enact this role of the Western man than Romaine Fielding, as he has been presented in that country. "Mr. Carlson of Arizona," has been written and produced by Romaine Fielding, who is the leading role himself. Hearst-Selig Weekly of Current Events, "Her Getchamane," a Vitaphone drama, which has been shown to-day. To-morrow, Viola Danna, featured in "The Stinging," a direct-cut Edison drama.—Advertisement.

"THE MILLION," AT THE REGENT
An engagement extraordinary at the Regent Theater to-day is the famous Players' Film Company's presentation of "The Million," with Edward Abeles, the popular star, in the leading role. It is a four-part photo drama of Henry W. Savage's recent sensational success—farcical comedy of character acting supplied in many years. The impersonation of "Le Baron," the crook, the play the star is called upon to portray no less than six entirely distinct characters. The attraction will be repeated to-morrow in addition to the regular lines of comedies and dramas which are making the Regent, the "classy theater for classy people."—Advertisement.

The Charge of the "Kilties"

(By London War Correspondent.)

"Our Scottish fighters are giving a good account of themselves every day. It is hard for the solid German ranks to withstand a wild bayonet charge by these brawny muscular giants. Never could I believe that so many men could charge so quickly as the "Kilties." Looking at the charge from a distance, all at once the plain seemed animated. It was no longer level. It appeared to lift up. Some shadows in the distance, in the gray line something like a giving way, and distinctly I could see men falling. But others continued forward. Then it was a frenzy of melee. No pen can picture it."

A Scotchman is said to be raised on oatmeal. He certainly is strong and brawny and makes the best of soldiers.

The body and the human system must be a laboratory for the constant manufacture of rich blood. Success and courage depend upon the blood, and the blood depends upon the stomach, for the stomach when healthy takes up from the food we eat the elements required for the blood. If the stomach is disarranged and cannot assimilate the food taken up, then the blood and the nerves starve for the proper nourishment they require. This human machine soon breaks down, like the engine without coal for its boilers, because the heart, liver and lungs do not receive the pure blood necessary to keep them strong and active. Our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without good pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil.

After many years in the active practice of medicine, Doctor R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general breakdown and nervousness, a tonic made of the glyceric extract of certain herbs and roots was the best corrective. This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For nearly half a century this tonic and alterative has been more largely used than any other blood medicine or nerve tonic. It is made entirely without alcohol, using pure glycerine instead. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements of the food, it drives out of the system the poisonous accumulations, and it helps digestion and cures dyspepsia and heartburn and many uncomfortable symptoms, such as heart palpitation due to gas formed in the stomach. It is especially adapted as a tonic in diseases attended by tissue waste, in recovering from spring fever; after the grip it is of great value. It has been extensively used as a re-builder after the severity of a rheumatic attack.

It is now put up in both liquid and tablet form. Write Dr. Pierce at the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice, also a free booklet on the blood.

Address Dr. Pierce if you want his 1,000-page Common Sense Medical Adviser in cloth binding. It only costs you three dimes, or the cost of wrapping and mailing.—Adv.
