

A New Way to Sweep Without Raising Dust

Yes—think of it! No more dust clouds rising to choke you—no more need of wearing a dust cap. You can dust your ornaments first, then sweep, and your ornaments will be as dust-free as before you started.

sweep instead of merely spreading the dust around, as ordinary sweeping does. A Nomordust home is a healthier home, because in dust lurk disease germs, and Nomordust "means just what it says."

Simply sprinkle a little Nomordust across your floor—then sweep it ahead of you as you go, and your floors will be cleaner than you can possibly get them without it.

It makes carpets look like new, bringing out the faded colors, and is equally fine for wood floors and linoleum. You only have to sweep half as often, because Nomordust gets all the dust out of a room every time you

Helen turned from the deck rail, where she had been watching the shores of Jamaica fade away into mist. They had been at sea two days, and although Helen had enjoyed every minute of the trip, there was a little feeling of sadness connected with it, too.

Somehow, there always seemed to be some little sadness connected with too good a time, and she had left Colon with plenty of pleasant memories.

It had been such fun to have such a perfectly splendid send-off. Several of the officers had come down to the wharf to see them off, and although Warren had been curt and disagreeable, Helen had laughed and talked with them till the last moment.

Now, as the sea air began to get too damp for her and wafted into the warmly lighted salon, Warren was sitting in a corner with a book, and she ran up and mischievously placed her hands over his eyes.

He looked up absently and then frowned. Warren was never too pleasant when he was interrupted. He was not a reader, by any means, but when he did pick up a book he developed all his attention to it for the time being. "Are you up to an exciting part?" she said teasingly.

"No," he snapped. "Don't be cross, dear," Helen persisted. "I really have something to tell you."

Helen Tells Warren About the Annoyer "Well, what is it?" he questioned, plainly eager to get back to his book. "Do you remember that man who stares at me so terribly?"

"You mean the man you think stares at you, I never noticed it." "Why, Warren, you have noticed it, because you mentioned it yourself last night."

"Did I? I thought I said that you were actually beginning to expect attention, since the stir you made at the army post."

"But, Warren, he is disagreeable. I met him on the deck just now, and he annoyed me with his smile." Helen shivered.

"Nonsense, don't imagine those things. Simply ignore him and you will be all right." "He looked at me and began to think that she had been unnecessarily foolish."

"Well, I'll go down and wake up Winifred, dear," she said merrily. "In a little while," he said, going back to the unfinished chapter.

Helen proceeded down to her stateroom and began to get out her clothes for the evening. The people on the steamer dressed more than they had coming down, and Helen was frankly glad. She liked the custom of dressing for dinner. As she slipped out of her shirtwaist and into a kimono she happened to raise her eyes to the window, and met the straight glance of a man who was calmly looking at her—the same man she had spoken to Warren about.

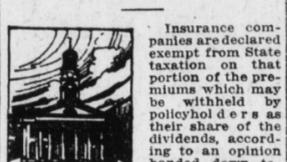

With a little cry she ran over to the window and pushed up the blind. Then she sat down on the edge of the couch and began to cry. After all, she had been right, and Warren had refused to bother about it. The man might come around to the door, she thought, and see her in such a state.

"Helen Sends For Warren to Come Winifred woke up at the noise and sat up looking sleepily at her mother, and the steward came in a couple of moments and asked Helen what she would have."

"Will you go up to the salon and ask Mr. Curran to come down," said Helen, her voice quivering curiously, and as the boy left, she fancied he had wondered what ailed her.

CAN'T IMPOSE TAX ON FULL PREMIUMS

Dauphin County Court Decides in Insurance Company's Favor on State Assessment

Insurance companies are declared exempt from State taxation on that portion of the premiums which may be withheld by policyholders as cash value, in addition to the dividends, according to an opinion handed down to-day by Law Judge S. J. M. McCarrell in the State tax case appealed by the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, Philadelphia. While the court's decision means something like $50,000 in back tax claims for several years, the opinion will serve as a precedent for similar appeals in the future. The insurance company was represented by Attorneys Frank Snodgrass and Paul G. Smith and its lawyer made the following statement in his conclusion: "That the deductions made from maximum premiums as hereinbefore stated were never received by the company, and with respect to these sums the company is not liable for the 8-mill tax." The company appealed from the charges for tax on gross premiums, contending that the dividends in the policy should be applied toward his premium if he chose. Many of them simply deduct their share from the premium so that the company never really receives the whole premium. Judge McCarrell sustained this point.

Anderson. Anderson, it is charged, was intoxicated and walked into the glass window. The window was insured by the American company and it promptly paid Jennings the policy. Now the company wants to recover from Anderson.

Pittsburgh Aviator Killed Near Verdun, Says Paris Dispatch

Paris, April 21, Midnight.—A report has been received here that William Thaw, an American aviator who flew with the French army, has been killed near Verdun. The report has not been confirmed, however. A post card dated the 17th and sent him by a friend showed that he was in good health on that date.

Pittsburgh, April 22.—It was said at the residence of Benjamin Thaw, father of William Thaw, early to-day that no report regarding the death of Mr. Thaw had been received and members of the family were inclined to discredit the report. Mr. Thaw returned from New York last night. It was said he has not heard anything from his son recently.

William Thaw, 2nd., is the son of Benjamin Thaw, of Pittsburgh and New York. He joined the Second Regiment of foreign volunteers fighting for France, soon after the war began at about the time he became of age. He offered to serve either as an engineer or an aviator, in both of which activities he had had considerable experience.

Thaw is a nephew of Harry K. Thaw and did considerable work as an aviator in this country before the war. On one occasion he began a flight at New Haven, circled the Statue of Liberty and flew under the four bridges across the East river. He was appointed a member of the first American aviator corps in December and was the first American to be accepted as a pilot for the French service. Since that time he has seen considerable service in the air.

Feeble Minded Boy Started Children's Industrial Fires

Investigation has brought to light the fact that a feeble minded boy between the ages of 6 and 7, who evidently is a "fire fiend," started three fires which occurred recently in the Children's Industrial Home at Nineteenth and Swatara streets.

The boy, John Rodkey, started the last of three fires yesterday, and Detective Ibach of the city police department, succeeded in getting a confession from the lad. The boy said he stole the matches and had started the three fires when no one was looking. Until a place can be found to send the youngster, he will be kept under close supervision at the Children's Industrial Home.

How Gold Dust actually works for you

THE active principle of Gold Dust is a valuable antiseptic cleansing agent. It actually works. It gets into the corners and crevices where fingers and washcloths can't reach. It permeates and dissolves dirt, grease and grime everywhere and it cleans and brightens everything. Gold Dust does all this—does this actual work—because it is made for that purpose.

MILLIONS of women all over the country use Gold Dust three times a day in washing dishes. They use it also for scrubbing floors, washing windows, etc.

But they do not realize all the uses of Gold Dust. Gold Dust is the only washing and cleaning powder needed in any home.

Gold Dust cleans metal work, nickel, enameled ware, etc., without scratching or marring the surface—leaving it sanitarly clean, bright and new-looking.

THE use of Gold Dust is an economy. There can be no waste when you use the exact small quantity required for each specific purpose. It is at once taken up by hot or cold water, forming the perfect cleansing solution.

No soap or other cleansing help is needed. Gold Dust does it all, and Gold Dust does its work far better than anything else can.

Use Gold Dust not only for washing dishes, but for washing bathtubs and bathroom fixtures, cleaning oil mops, cleaning and freshening linoleum and oil-cloth, cleaning and brightening pots, pans and cooking utensils, giving luster to glassware—for every cleaning and brightening purpose.

Gold Dust is as inexpensive as it is indispensable.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC Saturday, matinee and night, April 24—McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree." Friday, matinee and night, April 30—"Twin Beds."

MOVING PICTURES Palace, 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. Photoplay, 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. Regent, 12 noon to 11 p. m. Royal, 8 p. m. to 11 p. m. Victoria, 10 a. m. to 11 p. m.

McINTYRE AND HEATH One has to look a long way into the theatrical past to recall the debut of that funny pair, McIntyre and Heath, who will appear in John Cort's elaborate revival of "The Ham Tree," at the Majestic, on Saturday, afternoon and evening. The duo has amused and impressed them and they are funnier this year, in the midst of their brilliant electric light, than they were ever of old, when just two of them were able to pick the biggest vaudeville houses in the country, and they prove anew this year their ability to hold the stage for an almost unbroken period without wearying their friends in the auditorium. "The Ham Tree" is an elaboration of their old vaudeville sketch into a rattling good entertainment with up-to-date music and it is claimed one of the most able feminine choruses Ned Wayburn ever trained. This chorus was chosen for its ability to sing a dance as well as to look pretty.—Advertisement.

"TWIN BEDS" Some persons sleep in a totally dark apartment, and find it impossible to locate their bed, or any light, while others—whether from a sense of safety or not—cannot do without the electric light. The latter are brilliantly illuminated. The former condition is ridiculously illustrated in "Twin Beds," when Monti, the Italian grand opera tenor, unable to distinguish the electric light, summons his valet, and falls asleep. Selwyn and Co. are sending their production of Margaret and the Mystery Force, at the Regent, for a return engagement next Friday, matinee and night.—Advertisement.

BIG SHOW AT COLONIAL Headed by the biggest musical comedy act that ever played the theater, a new bill of vaudeville opened at the Colonial this afternoon for the regular week. "The Bachelor Dinner" is a gigantic piece of stardom. There are fifteen people of varied size and color, and all of them who make up a very charming chorus. They have lavish costumes and have been in the city for several days. Steps that go with the big musical comedy show. On the same bill are "The Opa King," a two-act musical act, Vandhoff and Louie, a novelty in oil paintings; Little Miss Jean, clever juvenile entertainer.—Advertisement.

THE PHOTOPLAY Probably never before has Edison produced a three-part drama that equals "The Stoning." If there is a material thing that is perfect, then this picture belongs in that category. It is the old story of the fallen woman who returns to the little country town, and the same is well fitted for this extraordinary feature which Edison has adapted from the story by James Oppenheim. "The Opa King," a two-act Essanay drama featuring Edna Mayo.—Advertisement.

"THE MILLION," AT THE REGENT Henry W. Savage's tremendously successful mystery farce, "The Million," with Edward Abeles, is to-day's attraction at the Regent Theater in addition to the regular program of first run films. The elaborate picture was shown last night and was witnessed by big audiences.

So quick is the action of the farce that its adoption to the screen was inevitable. Indeed, the plot is a motion picture itself. Edward Abeles is versatile and at all times entertaining. Though he is called upon to portray six distinct characters, he changes his personality with each costume and the effect is surprisingly entertaining. "The Million" is a safe and sure cure for melancholia and it is absolutely fatal to one's dignity. For to-morrow, Manager Magaro has booked the film production of Bert Hart's book, "Miles," which will be shown in five parts.—Advertisement.
