Aunt Este's Stories For Children THE ADVENTURES OF FAIRY SILVERWINGS

AUNT ESTE FOR APRIL 24

THE ADVENTURES OF FAIRY SILVERWINGS. Silverwings Takes a Ride on Goldwings.

On the wee pretty cushion so soft and so red. Sat Silverwings wishing that she just were dead. Oh yes, little ones, she was just like some more Of us-soon as things go wrong then life is a bore. Silverwings learned just like me and like you, That sometimes on earth, skies are dark, sometimes blue, But she yet had to learn when the cloudy times come, To whistle and wait for the gleam of the sun. So there on the cushion she sat sadly weeping. While her poor swollen wings kept a-beating and beating: For that nasty, that horrible fellow, the bee, Had given her plenty to think of you see; And the night was advancing with curtains of gloom, For over the hills crawled the pale_faced old moon.

Now in Fairyland there has never been night, So you can imagine poor Silverwing's fright. To the Palace in Fairyland wafted her prayer. At least, I suppose so, for down through the night Came a wee busy creature who carried a light, (A great phosphorescent light on his back-He seemed to have it all done up in a sack.) And right to the cushion where Silverwings sat He flew, "Don't cry, dear, please don't do that," Said he. "Come with me, we will fly far away, You will find night has pleasures as well as the day, For my lantern will glow in the darkest of places-I will show to you many new sights and new faces.

You will forget the sting of the Bee

When the wonderful land of the night you shall see.

Watch For the Next Adventure of Fairy Silverwings.
