"TWIN BEDDS" Men who are of convivial habits and who retire to their domicile slightly under the weather, can see themelves as others see them when they watch Signor Monit, the famous Italian tenor, in Selwyn and Company's production of "Twin Beds,' as he prepares to retire. An umbrella hanging on his right wrist is a source of annoyance-yet he is too intoxicated to take it off. He cannot remove his collar which is of the turndown variety, so he tears off the outer portion, leaving the inside still about his neck. His trousers cause him much concern. After he has suc-ceeded in doming his suit of pajamas, hwith thes into the vacant twin bed him bes into the vacant twin bed prelia, excludes the light and the saleep. It is uproariously funny. "THREE WEEKS" AT THE VIC-TORIA TODAY

The plaintiff is a niece of the late Fanny Carson, widow of Robert N. Carson, a wealthy Philadelphian. Today's testimony was that she left her home because her husband did not provide property for herself and chil-dren. While residing in Philadelphia she and her children were supported by Mrs. Carson, who died July 4, 1912, by Mrs. Carson, who died July 4, 1912, leaving the income of $25,000 to Mrs. Dobbins, then residing at Churchtown, this county. When counsel for Dobbins moved for a nonsuit on the ground that Mrs. Dobbins left without justification, her counsel amended the libel in divorce by adding to the desertion cause that of cruel treatment. The defendant pleaded surprise, and the case was continued.
