Clothes for Father and the Boys

WHILE we give a good deal of attention to young men's requirements in clothes, we haven't overlooked the needs of their elders. We realize that Father, too, has his own ideas about the kind of clothes he wants. He's inclined to be a bit more conservative, perhaps—but he's just as particular about correct style and good quality and fit. He'll find that we've provided for his wants with garments of quiet good taste that express the prevailing mode correctly and conservatively, with a dignity becoming to men of years.

Suits for Father are shown in a well chosen variety of attractive fabrics in models for every figure—short-stouts or long-lean, insuring perfect and comfortable fit.

REGAIN U. S. SENATE, PENROSE BATTLE-CRY

toth, president of the club, presided as toastmaster, and 600 political leaders and chieftains of industry and business attended the largest affair of its kind the American Club has ever held.

Senator Penrose spoke of the growing vision of Republican success in the national campaign next year and pitched his talk in the general note of harmony in the party.

Predicts Republican Victory

After reviewing the military and civil career of General Grant, Senator Penrose said:

"We need to-day in the affairs of the nation and in the legislative propositions which have been advanced in recent years a strong application of the common sense of Grant in dealing with matters of government. Demagogic agitation and a crop of economic heresies, as vicious in some respects as the greenback heresy which Grant destroyed, have been stirring discontent among high and low, rich and poor. These heresies, perhaps, were the luxurious experimenting under conditions of too much prosperity.

"After a period of unrivaled and extraordinary prosperity and development during the eighteen years of Republican administration under three Presidents the American people came to want a change. Evils in the body politic, social and industrial, were misrepresented, exaggerated or invented.

"Owing to an unfortunate division in the Republican party, which is now happily passing away, the Democratic party was successful in the last presidential election. The people have had the change, they have had a brief experience with the Underwood free trade tariff policy. They have felt the humiliation of the policy of watchful waiting. They have seen business paralyzed by hostile legislation of Congress, and now they are waiting for the coming opportunity in 1916 to register their verdict by an overwhelming majority in favor of Republican policies and a restoration of protection and prosperity and common sense in legislation.

"It will be generally admitted by persons conversant with the basic movements of finance and industry that there has been only one cause which has saved the nation from utter and disastrous business demoralization, and that has been the war in Europe. If it had not been for that war we would have witnessed a situation in this country compared with which the Cleveland administration would have been insignificant. The war for the time being has postponed the financial and industrial collapse, just as it has saved our government from a humiliating and embarrassing situation of the gravest character on account of the policy of watchful waiting in Mexico.

Control of Next Congress

"I take it that it is generally conceded that the next House of Representatives will be Republican by a substantial majority. Perhaps has a vigorous effort been put forth the present House of Representatives would be Republican. Most certainly would it have been Republican had it not been for the war in Europe, which distracted public attention and alleviated industrial conditions.

"When the day of reckoning comes, as it is rapidly approaching, let there be no doubt in the minds of the people as to who has been responsible for the policies which have brought the country to the condition in which it is. Moreover, I think any intelligent political observer will admit that the Republican party is as certain to elect the next President of the United States as anything can be certain in public affairs. But after all, the Republicans will not be fully restored to power in a way in which they can bring about the results which they desire. The immediate repeal of the present tariff trade tariff law and other remedial and amendatory legislation, together with the resumption of a vigorous foreign policy unless the Republicans have control of the Senate of the United States.

"In the election last November, by reason of lack of attention on the part of some central organization and on account of factional and local complications, the Republicans lost three senatorial seats which they ordinarily would be entitled to. The Democratic majority, therefore, which was in the last Congress amply sufficient in most cases, has been increased by these votes, and the task of building up a Republican majority in the next Congress at the presidential election of 1916 is increased to that extent.

Attacks Democratic Rule

"And here I want to say that never before the principles of the Constitution of the United States been more grossly violated than by the legislative methods adopted in the United States Senate in the House of Representatives and by the President under the present Democratic regime.

"But to return to the importance of securing Republican control of the United States Senate. Thirty-two senators are to come up for election in 1916.

"Now I come to the important features of the situation. The following States are now represented by Democrats in the Senate, who can be replaced by Republicans in the elections of 1916: Arizona, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and West Virginia.

"An examination of conditions in these States, and the information obtained in the elections in some of these States last November, confirms the belief that in a Republican tidal wave there is none of the States above mentioned in which there is not a reasonable prospect of electing a Republican senator. One State, Washington, is now represented by a Progressive in the Senate, and it is more than likely that whoever comes there from this State in the next Congress will be a Republican.

"With twenty-five Republicans holding over and twenty-seven to be elected in 1916, the total is fifty-two, a majority of eight in the Senate. Conceding that of the Republicans holding over three at most might not always vote with the Republicans, although more likely to do so after 1916 than heretofore, the fact still remains that with twenty-seven Republicans elected to the Senate in 1916, even if the three in question should occasionally vote with the Democrats, the result would be forty-nine Republicans and forty-seven in opposition, or a Republican majority of two."

Slaps at Governor

Mr. McClain in his speech said: "Animated as the Governor is by thoroughly conscientious motives, possessing as he does high ideals, sterling integrity and absolute sincerity of purpose, I, in common with others, must refuse to credit him with omniscience. I must refuse to subscribe to an absolutism which desires that a personal program in legislation shall not have an 'i' dotted or a 't' crossed by the members of that branch of government to which the Constitution allots legislation."

"I must refuse to agree that the manufacturers and producers of Pennsylvania shall be put in the same category as burglars, bank breakers and barn burners.

"Instead, as Republicans, of enacting industrial legislation in a form that will put brakes on business, our effort should be to take off the brakes.

"Certain gentlemen and certain newspapers in the last campaign arrayed against the Republican ticket would have us believe that the legislative branch should degenerate into a mere registering device to carry out the executive will. They have insisted on connection with what might be called industrial legislation—workmen's compensation, child labor and a tax on manufacturing corporations—that the Republican party should present the anomaly at Harrisburg of that which Republicans have been so vociferously denouncing at Washington. I am very happy to say there are indications that somebody will have the courage to throw the switch and avert the wreck.

McClain's remarks aroused mixed feelings. Many cheered, but a good many frowned.

yesterday to allow the West Construction Company's claim for an advance estimate, declared that the contractor's loss will run to approximately $10,000, but it was said to-day that the actual loss will approach nearer $25,000.

Before the city releases the river wall contractors for construction of the "steps" considerable repair work will have to be done by Stucker Brothers. This consists in the main of patching where chunks of the concrete had been chipped out by boys and other vandals who rolled rocks down the embankment or otherwise damaged the improvement work.

About a thousand feet of the top section of concrete will have to be placed on the river dam by the engineers of the Board of Public Works. This work will be resumed as soon as the river recedes sufficiently and will require possibly two weeks.

TO BUY PLAYGROUND AT 5TH AND EMERALD

Pittsburgh. These, he says, have offered the city several acres of Hoffman's Woods at $4,000 an acre.

Despite the fact that the local agent for the estate which owns the ground is said to have repeatedly declared that no offer will be forthcoming, Mayor Royal has insisted for several weeks that he expects the terms in writing.

The Mayor and Commissioner Taylor had a busy little verbal passage-at-arms over the playground ordinance yesterday afternoon. The ground will be bought for $14,700. The Mayor objected to the location, although he said he no longer questioned the price.

Commissioner Taylor declared that the Hoffman's Woods site was entirely too far out of the way of the children in the section of Harrisburg which the playground is intended to benefit.

When the Mayor Agrees

"This is something that is for the benefit of the children only and will be for years to come," he said. "It is something they want and need. So, while I believe in any other councilman, in saving all possible for the city, this is an instance to my mind where money would be judiciously expended. What difference does a few dollars make in a case like this when we have, or should have, the interests of the children of the city at heart?" said Commissioner Taylor.

In conclusion Mr. Taylor pointed out that Warren H. Manning, the city's park expert, had approved of the site.

"Well, Mr. Manning's views and my view's don't always agree," quickly said the Mayor.

"Only when it suits you," retorted Mr. Taylor. "Then you don't hesitate to quote and use his opinions."

HUNDREDS OF PENNA. GIRLS IN N. Y. DENS

MISS ROSE LIVINGSTON

"Angel of Chinatown" Tells of Pennsylvania Girls Held in White Slavery in New York

questioned by newspapermen as to just what she knew concerning vice conditions in Pennsylvania and how she figured granting women the ballot would tend to alleviate them.

In response to the first question Miss Livingston said: "I know more about vice conditions in New York than in Pennsylvania. But I do know that of the 500 girls I have rescued in my nine years of work in Chinatown, 200 came from Pennsylvania. All of them were very young. Their ages ranged from 10 to 16. None of them had grown up yet. Four of these girls came from Easton, six from Reading, nine from Pittsburgh, nearly a hundred from Philadelphia and the rest from smaller cities and towns.

"As to suffrage stamping out vice—we know that prostitution cannot ever really be stopped except through education. But we also know that we can stop the supply of girls and save the unwilling victims by stricter legislation. We need the women's votes to get this legislation. The women of the Western States proved that legislation could wipe out commercialized vice. In Oregon, Washington and California prostitution practically does not exist to-day. The women of these equal franchise States not only passed the 'injunction and abatement law, which holds the owners of property responsible for the use of their buildings for immoral purposes, but they are seeing that it is enforced.

"Some of the vile interests in San Francisco actually had the effrontery to propose erecting houses especially for prostitution, near the Panama-Pacific fair grounds. The women told them that if they built the houses, they, the women would see that the law tore them down. They were not built."

One persistent interviewer asked Miss Livingston why she was so sure woman suffrage would work for good and not for harm.

Do Women Urge Wrong?

"Have you ever known a case where women got up an agitation in favor of anything that was wrong?" she asked. "Have you ever known them to storm a legislature and lobby for the protection of vice and vicious interests? You know well that they never have. And these vicious interests know that the women will never be on their side. Look at the enemies of woman suffrage. Look at the thousands of dollars being spent by the white-slavers and their friends to defeat suffrage. How do you explain that kind of opposition if woman suffrage is not the power for good that its supporters claim it to be?"

Talks Here Friday

Miss Livingston will speak on underworld conditions here on Friday. She will deliver two talks at the Technical high school under the auspices of the local suffragists. The afternoon talk will be limited to women only. In the evening she will speak to a mixed audience. Admission will be free. Mrs. John Oenslager, chairman of the Woman Suffrage party of Harrisburg, will preside at both meetings.
