

ETCHING SHOWING HOW OTHER STATES HAVE TREATED ZONES ABOUT THEIR CAPITOLS

Warren H. Manning, the noted landscape artist, has in the above sketches shown how other States have treated the zones in the immediate vicinity of their Statehouses. In the Providence problem Mr. Manning in his report said: 'The problem is to simplify, unify and harmonize various incongruous conditions about important public buildings without injury to any important interest. The elements of the problem are the State Capitol Building and Grounds which as yet have no complete appropriate planning and in which trees as arranged will ultimately screen the buildings from the most important points of view; the State Normal School and Grounds having generally acceptable conditions; the Union Railroad Station from which is the principal point of view for thousands who are passing daily in the Harrisburg development. This applies especially to the Harrisburg development.'

SHORTY MILLER MADE BOYD PHYSICAL HEAD

In the Fall, Mr. Miller will be in complete charge of the athletic activities of the institution.
"Shorty" Miller is a graduate of the Central high school, class of 1910, and is one of the best known and most popular athletes in the city. While in Central he was a football, basketball, track and baseball star, excelling in each of these sports. He has passed over to State College, where he was one of the leading football players, being elected captain of the eleven. A famous run he made through the University of Pennsylvania team for a touchdown nearly the length of Franklin Field has gone down in the annals of football history.
One of the striking characteristics of the man is his extreme modesty, and this characteristic won him a popularity and admiration that probably no student in either Central of State ever before received.
He is especially well fitted for his duties of athletic director. Boyd Institution, being an authority in nearly all lines of popular sport.

"BREAKING" AN AUTO WORSE THAN A COLT

So Declares Sam Lehrman, Who Has Lost Two Cars in Two Days

Learning to operate a new automobile is just as difficult and enervating as "breaking in" a frisky colt, judging by the trying experience of Sam Lehrman, who conducts a general store at Front and Chambers streets.

Sam has driven many a colt in his time. Recently, however, he decided to tackle an automobile. He purchased a Ford. An experienced chauffeur brought it down to his residence.

Yesterday John Pencic and John Belleic, Lehrman's clerk and a carpenter, who is building the garage, decided they'd just knock off a bit and take a spin. Down below the Half-way House they came to grief. The car butted into a pole and just wouldn't budge away. Lehrman was sent for.

"This is a good time to learn my car," he soliloquized as he cranked up and started the machine limping up Front street. But the car was "frisky." It decided to tanzo. In long, sweeping curves it skimmed over the smooth surface of South street, and a big, burly truck was coming down and challenged the little car for the right of way.

But the Ford was spirited and wanted to finish the next dance. Zip! Over against the big truck it darted. Bang! A wheel came off, and Lehrman leaped to safety as the car settled along the side of the road.

But Lehrman is a plucky man, and a little experience like that doesn't discourage him a bit. Up to the garage in Harrisburg he went this morning and got a new car.

Proudly he swept down Front street, complete master of the second machine. At his store he obtained a big roll of linoleum and started out to deliver it. Up past the scene of last evening's trying experience he safely went, the machine obeying every twist and turn of the steering gear.

But at Washington street something happened. Lehrman doesn't know just what. He thinks, perhaps, the car was overheated and wanted to take a swim. Anyway, before he knew what had happened, the peaky car was down nosing around in the water of the old Pennsylvania canal, eight feet below the surface of Front street.
