LITTLE LADY HAS WILD ANIMAL PETS

LITTLE MISS CATHERINE WALLACE

Now comes little Miss Catherine Wallace, aged 4 years, a child of the sawdust ring—her mother, Mrs. Rose Wallace, is wardrobe mistress for the Barnum and Bailey circus, which exhibits here Thursday, May 6—and throws a bomb into the group of little girls who think they are in the seventh heaven of delight when they are cuddling their dollies or stroking the silky fur of their kittens.

Little Miss Wallace says that the average girl does not know what a real, honest-to-goodness pet is. She turns up her little nose in disdain at the thought of playing with dolls, or even with kittens and dogs.

now her "family" consists of a baby lion, a baby tiger and baby leopard. None of the animals is more than a few months old and they scamper and play around with the little girl and are the best of friends—as long as she treats them alike.

"My pets are better than dolls," she says. "I'd rather play with my lion and my tiger and my leopard than to play with dolls and kittens. They can almost talk to me. We have lots of fun, a heap more than I could have with dolls."

PUBLIC SERVICE REPORTS ON YEAR

Says Something Should Be Done to Halt the Great Loss of Life on the Railways

"The number of the accidents and casualties which occur in the State in the operation of the transportation facilities deserves the thoughtful consideration of the commission, the legislature and the public."

WHOLE STATE TO HELP ON GOOD ROADS DAY

Men in Every County Will Don Overalls and Go Out to Work on May 26

Judging from reports made to the State Highway Department, there will be a hearty response all over Pennsylvania to Governor Brumbaugh's call for "good roads" on May 26 and men in every county will don overalls and go out to work.

Every effort will be made not only to enlist the forces of the State Highway Department on "Good Roads Day" but also to urge an advisory township supervisors' boards in the more than fifteen hundred townships throughout the State to do all that they can to make the "Good Roads Day" red-lettered in the State's history.

A statement issued at the department says: "First Deputy State Highway Commissioner Hunter has written a circular letter to the county superintendents and the assistant engineers, in which he asks them, on behalf of the Bureau of Township Highways, to extend their co-operation in making the State-wide 'Good Roads Day' a success."

Mr. Hunter also has written a circular letter to the township superintendents, in which he expresses the same idea and adds: "As township supervisors you are directly affected by this movement and the Bureau of Township Highways urges that you lay aside all other work on this day and, along with the other volunteers in your neighborhood, give your labor for the improvement of your roads."

One of Harrisburg's Oldest Landmarks Will Pass Into Memory

Having served as a symbol of Harrisburg progress for the past one hundred and nineteen years, the three story building (to left of illustration) now occupied by this store, will cast its last shadow across Market Street during the coming week.

Dating Back to 1796

Only twenty years after the War of Independence; official records tell of two "story-and-a-half" dwellings situated on this spot (which were to have a 3-foot alley between them "forever"), and we may believe their erection took place at a much earlier date.

A Center of Activity

Always in the years that followed this spot was a center of social and business gatherings—many important dealings were transacted; many and thrilling yarns were spun between puffs of a corn-cob pipe.

We now find them passing through a series of ownerships, including John Harris, Jacob Gorgas, Philip Brindle, The Harrisburg Academy, and many others, until 1835 when Benjamin Park purchased the one property—a year later the other, and transformed them into the "Park House," one of those quaint old inns, famous for its hospitality.

Proud, too, of its serving as the Harrisburg Post Office from 1865 until 1886, after which the buildings were remodeled into a three-story structure—modern in that day, to provide one of the finest hotels in the city at that time, known as "The Grand."

In this capacity it passed down through years until 1911, when purchased by Bowman & Company; remodeled and annexed, to facilitate a fast growing business.

To Be Replaced With a Handsome Six-Story Structure For a Greater Bowman Store

In a few months, Harrisburg will witness the further advancement of a youthful ambition kindled almost a half century ago, within the founder, whose faithful efforts by head, heart and hand, will have materialized into a greater Commercial School where several hundred attentive students will continue to study the noble Science of Human Service.

Interwoven into a desire for architectural beauty and convenient arrangement, is the purpose to embody in it features that will make for complete safety and quicker service—eliminating unnecessary, cost-increasing features created only for show.

tion will be carried out—new and attractive fixtures, as well as improved mechanical devices are now under way.

When completed, we promise the Harrisburg public: a modern store in every respect—a practical store policy—trustworthy merchandise.
