

"In 1871 the Case Company aided in building this steam buggy."

Original Steam Buggy. From a picture in the Wisconsin State Historical Library.

Notice the difference between this steam buggy and the present-day CASE Car. This contrast pictures better than anything else the progress of the Case Company during the past forty-four years.

Since the earliest day of horseless carriages, the Case engineers have kept pace—often ahead—of motor car development.

The present CASE car is the result of years of study, of years of development. The picture of the CASE Car may look like other automobiles—it, too, has four wheels and a hood and a body.

But it is built in the CASE way. There's the difference. The CASE Company could never consent to produce a car less reliable than its other products. For 72 years the CASE name has been an honored one because the Company has kept faith with men. Our motives may be selfish in this making worthy products. But we are determined to make CASE Cars worthy of the name they bear.

This justifies our statement—always proved to those interested—that the CASE Car abounds in "Hidden Values."

In looking at the CASE you would merely see its style, its finish, its roominess. In driving it—you merely "feel" its power, control and comfort.

But when you come to go into construction details—when you commence to compare it—detail by detail—then you commence to realize its Hidden Values. When you have driven it for several years—when you look back at the lack of repair bills and the low operating costs—then you know it is honestly built. You realize that only superior materials have been used, made and put together by painstaking craftsmen.

There are 33 ways we could have made a CASE costing less—but it would have been a car less perfect. We have built for you the kind of car you'd want to build for yourself. We sincerely believe it is the best car of its class—and as good as cars costing far more.

While we have never "skimped" on the car to reduce its price—there are two ways we save where others must spend:

1. This car is built in the immense CASE plant, backed by CASE engineers. We lost no time or money in establishing our motor car department.

2. The CASE Car is sold by our established sales organization—world-wide. We thus save the usual heavy selling expense.

What we save in these two items goes right back into the car. Otherwise it never could be priced so low.

Its price, remember, includes as regular equipment an Extra Tire, Extra Inner Tube on Rim with Cover, Weed Non-Skid Tire Chains and 8-Day Clock. This wonderful CASE Car—and its extra equipment—for $1350, 5 percent discount if cash!

Will you come in today to see this car? We are always glad to show it, without obligating you.

"JITNEY" SERVICE STATION POSSIBLE

Two or more stations may be opened in the business section. Other plans for running cars and for out-of-town service will also be taken up at the Sunday meeting.

Real service by jitney chauffeurs was shown this morning when one of the drivers stopped his automobile to give one of his passengers a match, as the man wanted to light his cigar. This accommodation surprised the passenger so much that he asked the driver a few questions about his work. He was still more surprised to learn that the jitney chauffeurs not only try to please their customers as much as possible, but that in many instances inconvenience themselves in order to be courteous.

Several of the drivers are veritable bureaus of information for persons who are unacquainted with the city. One man stepped up to a jitney driver the other day and inquired the shortest route to a small business place on Allison Hill.

"Take you there in five minutes for a jitney" was the response. The driver on the way out pointed out some of the most important places in the city explained the trolley system, talked about his business and made a sale for the local businessman by his courteous treatment of a stranger.

WAR BABIES SOON A BRITISH PROBLEM

ent time. I have information of one county borough, which is said not to be exceptional, where there are more than 2,000 young women and girls in this condition. The total number of illegitimate children shortly to be born is very many thousands, not a few of the prospective mothers being little more than children themselves. "Now these facts open up a prospect which, unhappy under any circumstances, will be nothing short of disastrous unless men of authority in church and State resolve without delay to prepare for it and to handle it with all the wisdom, courage, and boldness they can command. It is just such a problem as the British public is prone to hide away and to say and think as little about as possible. But to ignore or conceal the truth would be moral cowardice of the deepest dye. It is our duty to take the own course, without recognizing an imperative public duty toward the young unmarried mothers and their offspring, would be a national crime. "It is not as if we were merely faced with the problem of illegitimacy on an unexampled scale and in an acuter form than of old. All the circumstances are unprecedented. Sacred as are human life and character at all times, the present wastage of the most vigorous of our manhood sets a stamp of exceptional value on the approaching increment of population. This effort should be spared to secure that these children come into the world under healthy conditions, and are reared so as to be a credit, both morally and physically, to the country, and it is not less imperative that the mothers, both for the children's sake and their own, should be saved from the degradation which too often follows a single lapse from virtue. We must resolutely cast aside established theories, prejudices and formulas about setting a premium on immorality. "In the middle of a national life-and-death struggle, even the most censorious—and especially those pious personages who exhort us to forgive the baseness of our enemies—may surely look upon the frailty of our own men and women with an eye of sympathy and forgiveness, and refrain from blame. Very many of the men whose children are about to be born have already amply redeemed their fault by giving their lives for their country and for us; and it would be possible to bring home responsibility for their error to any who may ultimately survive the battlefield. But let it be frankly acknowledged that the women are no more responsible than the men. The strictest justice, then, demands for the women complete and whole-hearted forgiveness, sympathy and assistance. At a great and memorable period of our history let there be no repetition on a large scale of the horrible hypocrisy that idolized Nelson and left the woman to starve whom he committed to his dying breath to the nation's keeping. "What," asked Mr. McNeill, "is to be done? Thousands of young girls are nearing the ordeal of womanhood, racked with shame and terror at the cruel censure of the world they live in. Many are already tempted to criminal means of escape from the consequences of unchastity; some may be tempted later even to the capital offense. For the vast majority there is, at all events, the prospect of child-bearing in unprepared conditions, almost certainly without proper attention either of midwife or doctor, and as regards locus, with a choice between their own narrow, crowded home, among angry, outraged and censorious neighbors, and the night which they know not whither, and what about the children, who will form an appreciable proportion of the next generation of Englishmen? Are they to be born in the streets of the Marne, of Ypres, of Neuve Chapelle, to carry through life the stigma of shame for irregular birth? Are they, who, on esoteric principles, should be the most virtuous of our race, to be handicapped from the start by impoverishment both of physical constitution and of moral character, through ignorance of the facts of their parents' lives? "A certain amount of charitable amateur effort is being made to meet the needs of the case by ladies who have become aware of the facts. These ladies propose to start schools for mothers, where the girls may learn how to care for their own health and that of their babies, and may also be helped to preserve their self-respect. This is the right spirit and a move in the right direction. But it must fall far short of the requirements. What is wanted is for the religious leaders of the nation, in the first place, to come forward with an honest and courageous pronouncement that under existing circumstances the mothers of our soldiers' children are to be treated with no scorn or dishonor, and that the infants themselves should receive unshamed welcome. "In the second place, the government should at once pass legislation, drastically reforming—even if only as a temporary measure—the laws of bastardy. It also has to be considered how provision is to be made for the fatherless children, whose girl mothers have no separation allowance, no separate homes of their own, and no means of support. If nothing is done, thousands of them will fall upon the streets. Better that they should be boldly adopted as the honorable children of the State than they should sink through life as the children of shame and the parish. The precise method by which the object in view can best be accomplished may tax the wisdom of statesmen; but the immediate urgency of the problem is not open to question. "Officials Stirred High church and government officials have become involved in the controversy over the disposition and care of war babies. The nation is stirred by the announcement that the War Babies and Mothers' League is caring for more than 4,000 soldiers' children born out of wedlock. Church officials and others are wrangling over Ronald McNeill's statement that men at the front who left prospective or actual war babies at home should be married by proxy. It has also been suggested that the war babies be adopted and supported by the government. The bishop of Oxford, in deploring the situation, said: "The controversy indicates a very widespread laxity of sentiment and feeling with regard to sexual matters. I do not doubt in the least that of two vices, intemperance and sexual immorality, the latter is working incomparably greater havoc. There is also an extraordinary and almost un-
