Aeroplanes to Be Used by Seal Hunters in North

St. Johns, N. F., May 5.—A novel use of the aeroplane is under consideration by owners of sealing vessels as a result of the failure of the seal hunt this year. It is proposed that two experienced aviators be engaged to visit the east coast and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, respectively, just before the opening of the next season and locate the herds. The information thus obtained would enable the fleet to sail directly for the scene of the hunt, instead of spending much time in searching for the animals.

"Their Married Life"

Nora greeted Helen with tearful eyes as they all stormed the door at once.

"Is everything all right, Nora?" questioned Helen anxiously peering around at all the things she had missed for a long time.

"Yes, Nora, was anything stolen?" said Warren scathingly. "Where is the cat?"

"Oh, yes, is Pussy Purr Mew all right, Nora," said Helen. "Where is she?"

"In the kitchen, Ma'am, I'll get her."

"Got something good for lunch, Nora?" called Warren after her as she left the room.

Nora flushed good naturedly at Warren's bantering remark.

"Asparagus soup, some fruit salad, and strawberry shortcake," she recited glibly. "Mrs. Curtis's mother arranged things this morning early."

"How long have you been here, mother? Just think! there was so much to say that I haven't asked you before now."

"A couple of days. Don't you notice how clean everything looks? You'd better come in your room and take off your things."

Helen followed her mother into her room and gazed delightedly at the new window sill was banked with daffodils and the sun was pouring through on them so that the room looked like a Spring garden.

"Where did they come from?" she said, burying her face in their cool fragrance.

"Warren asked me to have flowers here, and I love daffodils in the Spring. There's a lot of mail for you out on the table."

Helen began unpacking her little handbag and now began to take down her hair. She ran into the bathroom and talked to her mother from there as she splashed in the refreshing water, then she hastily twisted up her hair and slipped into a fresh shirt waist. She was dabbing powder vigorously on her face when Warren came in.

"This looks something like it," he said smiling. "Mother you certainly are a great one. They're great!"

"And you were a dear," said Helen, impulsively. "Warren, I never knew you to be so thoughtful."

Warren anxiously for a Satisfying Meal

"It just proves that I can be if I want to. I'm hungry. Wonder if Nora isn't nearly ready."

"I'll go out to see," said Helen's mother rising with the intuitive notion that they would like to be alone.

"Warren," said Helen going up to him, and taking the top of his coat in her hands in a way she had, never can thank you. Just think you knew all this while I was raving about having some one to meet us."

Warren smiled and took her hand in his for a moment.

"Glad to be back?"

"Yes; aren't you? Doesn't everything look prettier?"

"You bet. He slipped his arm around her for a moment and she snuggled up close to him. Then the door was pushed open and Winifred appeared.

"Here's pussy," she said, gravely proffering the cat to Helen, who laughed merrily and edged away.

Pussy Purr Mew had been playing in the coal and the edges of her long ruff were suspiciously smirched with black, as was the blue ribbon bow that was fastened coquettishly to her little silver collar. She looked at Helen imploringly, who stooped and patted her between the eyes, and then sent Winifred out to the kitchen with her. The sound of Nora's indignant voice and the accompanying sound of a meal in preparation was borne to Helen from the kitchen, and then Winifred trotted back obediently to be tidied up for lunch.

Helen hurried out to the livingroom, and lovingly touched all her cherished belongings. Everything was just as she had left it, and she went out into the diningroom to see how near things were ready.

"It seems so strange to get back and keep house again," she said happily. "It all seems too good to be true, I feel so happy."

"Everything is just about ready and Helen if you want to tell Warren, Nora needs to hear the good news. You can bring your mail with you and read it between courses."

Large Lot of Mail Waiting to Be Read

All right, mother, we'll be right in."

In the livingroom a pile of mail was lying on the table. Warren was sorting this as she came in.

"I don't know how many cards. Did you know the Stevens were in Florida?"

"No, dear, but I expected them to go South with the writing?"

"Well, come on," said Warren, as she stopped to examine some of her mail. "That is, if lunch is ready."

"Yes, I came in to tell you," said Helen and they walked into the diningroom.

"I don't feel as if I could ever be cross about anything again," said Helen as she tasted her soup. "Why, Nora, I never knew you could make such delicious asparagus soup. Is this something new?"

"From a recipe of mine," said her mother, as Nora blushed and smiled at the praise, and then there was silence as they all ate hungrily.

"I tell you, home cooking tastes different from the stuff they give you on board the ship," said Warren, as they were waiting for the salad, and then he gave a whoop of laughter and held up a card for Helen to see.

"Yes, I recognize the writing," he said merrily. The writing was the fine feminine writing of the mysterious letter, and Helen laughed and blushed furiously.

She could consider it a joke now, but it had been serious enough once.

PA. MANUFACTURERS ON CHILD LABOR BILL

Give Their Reasons For Opposing Parts of Cox Measure Soon to Be Law

In a long statement issued last evening Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, set forth the position of that organization on the Cox child labor bill now in the Governor's hands.

"It goes without saying that the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association is opposed to the act in its present form. There are a number of points that may accrue from it cannot be laid at the door of this organization.

"The association has not opposed, but has zealously advocated, child labor law, and even this child labor law, provided that certain features of it which we knew to be iniquitous could be amended to conform to and conform with common sense.

"Particularly we have always favored the provision in section 14 for physical examination of all minors between the ages of 14 and 16, who become applicants for employment certificates. We have always favored placing the responsibility for the issuance of employment certificates in the hands of the physicians of the local school boards and we have been in favor of permitting these physicians to re-examine the working minors in their districts as frequently as they may deem it advisable to do so, and to cancel employment certificates at their discretion. This, we think, constitutes the most practical and complete 'child labor' law that could possibly be enacted. We believe that all other provisions in the act are more or less superfluous. In our judgment, prohibition of work or permission to work should be governed by the individual case and not by the calendar or by the clock.

"However, we were entirely willing to have the hours of a work day and the hours of a work week specified, provided that those hours should be made uniform with the hours in the women's employment law, that is, 10 a day and 54 a week. The reason for this, is that the far greater part of the work of the minors and the work of the women are interdependent and interlocking.

"We were also willing to grant one day out of the mills and factories each week for any sort of vocational or continuation school the State might establish. It should be borne in mind that this would have meant a 44-hour work week, instead of a 54-hour work week, or four hours less than the National Child Labor committee has ever asked for or than any of the 21 States which have this law, or 1 1/2 hours out of employment—supposing that such employment were to continue.

"As a matter of fact, the bill, while benefiting nobody, will seriously harm those whom it was designed to help."

Notaseme Stone Lined Refrigerators Can Endure Intense Heat

The fact that they have proved ordinarily fireproof indicates how difficult 't would be for summer heat or the heat of the kitchen to penetrate to the inside.

This is because six divisions make up the wall—two of hard wood; two of polar felt; one of dead air space, and one of stone.

The stone part is the lining. It is seamless with rounded corners making it germproof; no cracks or crevices in which germs may lodge and breed. The doors fasten with locks that form a vacuum within, and here is the great saving, for ice melts unusually slow in a vacuum.

Case is made of ash, and highly polished.

Reasonably priced: $18.50, $25, 29.50, $33 and $39.

ANOTHER MILLION IN DAUPHIN'S HOLDINGS

An increase of nearly a million dollars additional in personal property returns will be shown by the report of the Dauphin county commissioners to the State this year, it is estimated, and as soon as the assessors' account from the Third ward of the city is received, the total will be definitely figured out. The clerks of the Commissioners' office have completed their computation of the returns, with the exception of the Third ward and from present indications, it is estimated that the figure will reach at least another million. The personal property valuation last year—the money at interest, judgments, etc.—showed an increase of nearly $3,000,000. The report to the State authorities will be ready by June 1.

Boyer Submits April Report.—Harry A. Boyer, county inspector of weights and measures, presented his report for April to the County Commissioners, to-day. Mr. Boyer tested thirty scales, adjusted eight and condemned one; tested 153 dry and 209 liquid measures and condemned six of the former and eight of the latter; 126 miscellaneous measures were examined, five of which were adjusted and four condemned. Of the eighty-one other weights tested, eighteen were adjusted.
