THE ADVENTURES OF FAIRY SILVERWINGS

Silverwings Visits Brown Owl.

Firefly and Silverwings traveled right on; "I want to see more 'fore the break of the dawn" Said Silverwings: "This night traveling is dandy, I love it as much as good Fairyland candy: I love those Stars and I love that Moon! Can't you take me up there real soon?" Said he: "I'm a star of the earth instead: My brothers and I must twinkle about In the lowlands and meadows-you'll soon find out If you live long enough, that when you're a Fairy You had best stay in Fairyland; better be wary Of going out where you do not belong-You may not be happy as you were when at home We Firelies belong to the earth, not the sky;

So down here we stay, and never once try

To enter the land that we're not meant for."

Said Silverwings: "Please do not say one word more!" "Please don't talk of such sad, sad things, But light your lantern and spread your wings,

And take me away to see more sights, I love this traveling around at night." "All right," said Firefly, "then we'll away

To see the chap who's blind by day, But sees at night. He's a queer old fowl,

By name Mr. Brownibus Peaky Head Owl!" So off they flew where the thick trees grew,

"Tis I," said the Firefly, "I bring with me A Fairy from Fairyland of high degree." I'll make you my queen, little Fairy so bright."

But Silverwings sobbed as she answered "Not you," As she flew away Old Owl hollered: "Who then? Who-o? Who-o?

Watch for the next adventure of Fairy Silverwings.
