HOW MUCH LAND IT TAKES TO PASTURE ONE PERSON

The following is taken from the current issue of Farm and Fireside:

"How much land does it take to support a cow, or a horse, or a hog? Rather important questions to every one of us, but not so important as the query:

"How much land does it take to support a person?"

A recent survey made by the United States government in Ohio seems to show that it costs on the average $197 to board and house each person on the farm.

"That the husband, wife and three children must have an income of $985 if they live as well as the average."

"This is the income in dollars, and the examination—on forty-four farms—indicates that it takes forty acres to 'pasture' a person."

RAT-KILLING CLUB IN TEXAS

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside appears the following account of a boys' club in Atascosa county, Texas, which combined good farming with the primal hunting instinct in man:

"It is a rat-killing club.

"All the boys start in as high privates, but the soldier with a record of a hundred rats becomes a corporal.

"A sergeant must have killed 200.

"A second lieutenant's commission goes to the slayer of 500.

"Probably the rats will not last till the army secures a general, but rats are numerous, and one never can tell.

"No more seriously useful work can be undertaken than this one of exterminating rats, and after the rats are gone Mr. Kloppenburg, the county agent, has other labors for the army, including the trial by court-martial of the various birds to determine whether or not they should be killed, the improvement of the roads, and the like. It is to be hoped that the fly will not be allowed to escape."

"TYPHOID MARY" IS BLAMED FOR EPIDEMIC

Authorities Believe Woman, Immune From Disease, Transmitted It to Newport

Newport, Pa., May 13.—With more than forty cases of typhoid fever already reported here, local and State health authorities are to-day making every possible effort to check a further spread of the disease which is supposed to have been brought into this borough by milk bought from a "Typhoid Mary." Some of the most prominent residents of the town are ill and three deaths already have been recorded.

The local authorities and Miss Sarah Butler, a supervising nurse, hurried here by the State Department of Health will confer on the advisability of enacting one of the unused hotels here as an emergency hospital until the epidemic is under control.

Traced to Milk Supply

It was stated this morning that the number of cases would likely go beyond fifty as there are quite a few persons suspected of having the fever but whose illnesses have not as yet been diagnosed. The first case was discovered about a week ago and others followed in rapid succession. It was like a bolt from a clear sky as Newport is noted for its cleanliness and its water supply is of the best. Physicians at first almost failed to realize that they had typhoid fever to contend with, knowing the conditions existing in the borough, but they, the local and State health authorities began an investigation and traced the origin of the epidemic to a supply of milk brought into the town by a local distributor. Further inquiry elicited the information that the milk was from a farm where a short time ago the owner died of typhoid fever.

The widow continued to conduct the place and although she was never ill with the fever she is suspected of having transmitted the bacteria to the milk and in turn to the customers of the local milk distributor. Although the authorities are not positively certain that the woman is responsible, she is strongly suspected. She has heard the stories of "Typhoid Mary" of Philadelphia notoriety and is now suffering from nervous strain brought on by fear that she unwittingly caused the epidemic. Samples of her blood were taken to-day and a thorough analysis will be made by a State chemist.

The State authorities who are here have commended the residents of Newport for the precautions they have taken in their effort to control the disease.

Although every effort is being made to keep the disease within the borders of Newport, it is understood that there are some cases outside.

"Sporting Desire For Sensation," Says Writer

Venice, via London, May 13.—"No matter how deeply one may sympathize with the dead of the Lusitania," says an editorial in the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, "there is no ground in international law for America to intervene. Shall the Germans stand helplessly while England monopolizes the importation of arms and munitions of war?"

"Why did millionaires like Vanderbilt want to travel on a ship of death after warning? It was a sporting desire for sensation which brought disaster to them."

SOCIALISTS FIX DATE

LABOR FEDERATION ENDORSES SUFFRAGE

of Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, an anti-suffragist from Trenton, N. J., who, dissatisfied with the audience given her on the opening day of the convention (last Tuesday) spoke against the anti's case before the delegates. Half a dozen representatives of the unions connected with the liquor industries fought her in a spirited manner, but she prevailed that only recognized delegates should be granted the privilege of the floor to discuss the suffrage resolution.

In referring this decision, President Maurer explained that both the anti's and the suffragists had been given the opportunity to present their respective cases before the convention on Saturday and that further presentations from either Mrs. Oliphant or Mrs. Gertrude Fuller, who had represented the suffragists, were unnecessary. He was supported in his action by a majority of the delegates, but it was not until after a heated discussion led by delegates from Philadelphia that the matter was dismissed and the vote on the resolution calling for the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor's support of the suffrage amendment at the polls this year, was taken.

Vigorous Arguments

Meaningful prior to the appearance of Mrs. Oliphant, vigorous arguments in favor of the convention supporting the woman suffrage resolution, were presented by Steve McDonald, president of the Scranton Central Labor Union, and "Dave" Williams, of Allentown. Both speakers urged the delegates to remember that it was the working women who were the backbone of the nation and that to renounce her right to it would be disloyal to the basic principles of organized labor.

Mr. Williams struck a responsive chord when, in answer to the argument that some women would not use the ballot, he said: "Let the society women who want to give their monkey dinners and not vote if they don't care to. But let the working women who do want to vote, and who do need it, have it. Thunderous applause greeted his plea."

Steve McDonald speaks

Steve McDonald, the president of the Scranton Central Labor Union, said in part:

"I have been sent here by the Scranton Central Labor Union and I speak as the representative of its members and the members of its allied unions. They believe that this is the best way to secure their endorsement of suffrage for women."

"Every crime, every infamy, every injustice inflicted on the men and women of this state, is directly charged to the neglect and ignorance of the men who have not fully exercised their right of the ballot. We must laws that are at fault. They made them."

"If we have never yet been able to establish laws that were just by the vote of men, it is time we took our mothers and daughters, our wives and sisters into the political arena so that we may see if their good influence will not enable us to enact laws for the benefit of mankind."

Laws for Hogs

"Do you believe the mothers who go down into the valley of death to bring their children into this world, and who would ever vote for a condition of things which permits a man to apply to the government and secure the services of high paid experts to cure a sick hog for him, and then the government asks the government to help him with an expert to cure his sick child? He is told there is a law for hogs, but no law for children."

"If that is equitable law, it is time we had a change of opinion."

"There are 8,000,000 children and girls and women in our factories and mills, and they are being fed to the jaws of criminal greed, that their lives are being crushed out because they are helpless."

"The lives of our children and the wives and the mothers of the poor are deprived of all those chances for ideal things which we should all strive for."

As to Better Laws

"Do not believe anyone who tells you the women's votes will not help get better laws. For in the suffrage question it is not the men who have already enacted better laws. You will find that their first move was to attack the auction block on which our children were being sold into child slavery and our women into white slavery. It was the frenzied appeal of the mothers that secured these laws against such things."

"The law that is damnable, deplorable and lamentable in the laws can be traced, as I said before, to the neglect of the men who now vote. Let us hear the plea of the girls who work in the mills and the factories, the women who are so proud to welcome into our labor organizations, the women who have brought us into the world and who have been forced to go out into the world and labor to keep us alive. Let us hear their plea and help get them the vote."

"Dave" Williams on the Floor

"Dave" Williams, of Allentown, speaking for the resolution endorsing suffrage, which had been introduced by the Governor, which he is a member, said in part:

"I am surprised to see any opposition to a resolution endorsing woman suffrage at a convention of the Federation of Labor of Pennsylvania, a state where working conditions are so rotten and the interests are able to drive down wages by using unpaid women and children labor."

"Those who say that woman's place is in the home and she should not interest herself in things outside of it should remember that as man claims the vote, it is his fault that these bad labor conditions exist."

"Suffrage is one of the marks of progress. One hundred years ago women were not even considered as the first man to advocate their admission to the public schools was arrested. Think of it."

"The man who would make a slave of the wife must expect that that wife will have stunted children. You are the ones to blame for the fact that children are the victims of industrial greed. The women are helpless now. All they ask is freedom to help themselves."

"The workmen of the labor unions should do their utmost to get women the vote so they can ask them to help secure better labor laws. Think what an aid the hundreds of thousands of workmen's votes would be!"

"Let the society women who want to give their monkey dinners and their whist parties stay at home and not vote if they do not want to. But let the working women who do want the vote have it."

"When the aye and nay vote was taken on the resolution the nays swayed because a volume of noise that confused matters and left the chair in doubt."

"Roll call! roll call!" demanded Steve McDonald. "Get them on record. Let us see who they are so we can tell the men who made them delegates how they have betrayed their instructions from their local unions."

"The same delegates who had opposed the resolution now opposed the roll call. Under the rules of the convention, a standing vote was first taken. The chair announced the resolution as 154 yeas for the endorsement of suffrage and 48 opposed. This settled the question so definitely that there was no need for further action and the roll call was dispensed with to save the time of the convention.

Other resolutions adopted were: Endorsing the recommendations of

John Fenwick Urged Not to Sail on the Ill-fated Lusitania

Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart this morning received a letter from the Syndicate Trading Company, New York, stating that John Fenwick, St. Gall representative of the Syndicate Company, who sailed from New York on the Lusitania, has undoubtedly been lost. The letter after telling of the loss of their representative says: "It was against our advice that Mr. Fenwick sailed on the Lusitania. We recommended his going via the Mediterranean which was the way he came, or to take a Holland-American steamer to Rotterdam, but he did not believe that there was any danger, and as he had some business to transact in England, he decided, to take his chances on the Lusitania."

DEMAND REPARATION

Paris, May 13, 1915. A. M.—The American Chamber of Commerce in Paris has adopted a set of resolutions calling upon President Wilson to exact reparation from Germany for the loss of American lives by the torpedoing of the Cunard liner Lusitania.

David Williams, of Allentown, charged the Philadelphia and Pittsburg delegates with opposing the motion for reparation until they could bring more delegates to Harrisburg for the convention. No name was mentioned during the arguments, but it was said after the meeting that Robert McCrath, of Pittsburg, representing the Central Labor Union, would be a candidate against President Maurer.

After a number of delegates had scored the United Mine Workers, and charged that the miners were only a part of the convention, Francis Feehan, of Castle Shannon, Pa., poured oil on the troubled waters. He called attention to the fact that he was a miner, and that the Federation could not get along with mine workers alone. "That every delegate who is important and the mine workers should not consider that they alone should dictate."

Steve McDonald, of Scranton, moved that the motion to hold the election this afternoon be tabled, and it was passed by a vote of 13 to 9.

Francis Feehan reported on the results of the visit of the executive committee to Governor Brumbaugh yesterday. He said the Governor promised to give all interested parties due consideration before taking any action on the full crew repealer. The convention adjourned at noon, and the delegates marched to the Capitol to be photographed.

Try Skin Absorption Instead of Cosmetics

The constant use of rouge and powder invites a coarsened, roughened condition of the skin, eruptions, enlarged pores, blackheads and wrinkles. If you've learned this from experience, suppose you quit cosmetics and try the following:

Ask your druggist for an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax and begin using it at once. Apply like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Keep this up for a week or two. The wax will absorb the dirt, the coarse, colorless or blemished top skin, but so gradually as not to discommode you at all. Just as gradually the clear, velvety, naturally-tinted under-skin comes to the surface. And mercolized wax becomes your everlasting friend.

For those wrinkles and large pores, make a face bath by dissolving in an ounce of powdered axolite in half pint witch hazel. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties, and beneficial results come quickly.—Advertisement.
