Their Married Life"

"Isn't it awfully early, dear?" said Helen as Warren roused her.

"Well we want a good start," he explained, "and I thought you wanted to see about the lunch."

"I do, but that will only take a few minutes. I have everything ready and all I have to do is to make the coffee.

"Is Nora up?" Warren questioned.
"She hasn't come home from church yet," said Helen, who was bustling around. "Would you like the coffee iced, dear? It feels as though it were going to be a hot day."

"You might ice one bottle and have one hot," said Warren, as usual not stopping to consider the extra trouble, and Helen smiled to herself as she went out into the kitchen to see if the kettle was boiling. Nora had everything ready to start breakfast as soon as she returned, and as Helen was finishing the sandwiches the key turned in the lock and Nora came in quickly.

"Oh, Mrs. Curtis," she began, "I'll

"Oh, Mrs. Curtis," she began, "I'll attend to everything; you go in and dress," and Helen relinquished things gladly and went into her room to finish dressing.

ish dressing.

"I'll just have a cup of coffee," said Warren, who had finished dressing, "and then I'll go down to the garage to see if everything is all right."

Before she was ready to snatch something herself she heard the door close and knew that Warren had left. Helen felt very happy this morning. She was feeling well and this was their first long trip in the car. They were going to take a picnic lunch and go off in the country for the day. It was so different from the way they generally spent their Sundays, and Helen could not help thinking to herself how different Warren had been lately.

Swered her abruptly. "Up to New Rochelle."

"Do you think Bob and Louise will meet us?"

"No, Nora, there isn't another thing, and than you for helping me."
Helen finished her breakfast and went back to her room. She got out her steamer coat and tried the effect of a new black and white sport hat. Then she was ready and she sat down to wait for Warren. The sound of the horn down below made her run to the window, but it was not their car, and Helen sat down before the open window and skimmed over the papers.

A New Model Especially Suited to Flouncing and to Bordered Stuffs.

A FASHIONABLE SKIRT.

8574 Straight Gathered Skirt, 24 to 32 waist.

8574 Straight Gathered Skirt, 24 to 32 waist.

New fabrics are being shown in a really exquisite variety of borders and they are especially appropriate for straight skirts. This one can be joined to a yoke or extended to the waist line as may be preferred. It is full, according to the latest requirements, and it takes extremely graceful and pretty lines. The yoke is cut to the slightly raised waist line, but when the skirt without the yoke is used, it can be finished either at or above the normal line. In one view, it is made of flouncing, in the other, of plain material, and the latter is just as pretty as are the bordered fabrics. The straight lower edge also allows of a hem-stitched finish, and some of the new cotton and linen fabrics are exceedingly dainty finished in that way. Also cotton fabrics show a great many brocaded or broché effects, and such are always especially desirable for simple models. A brocaded crêpe would be charming with a hem at the lower edge sewed by hand and with stitches as nearly invisible as possible.

For the undium size will be required 34 yds. of material 27 or 36 in. wide, 29 yds. 44, or 214 yds. of flouncing 36 in. wide, with 12 yd. of plain material 36 for the skirt with yoke. The pattern 8574 is cut in sizes from 24 to 32 inches waist measure. It will be mailed to any, address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

SIGLER CO. CLOSES $125,000 CONTRACT

is known as the "adaptable action,"
the original product of the company.
Mr. Bard announces that several other smaller contracts have been closed up with dealers throughout the East and Middle West, since the company has moved into its big new factory, recently completed.
The flew factory has been entirely gotten in shape for the accommodation of an output exceeding 5,000 actions per year. There has been some delay, Mr. Bard says, in filling orders on account of the enormous amount of work necessary in getting the many departments systematized and equipped. However, this work has now been completed and the plant has been running day and night completing some special work on filling orders which had been held up, and in making up some new sample actions to be shipped to the piano manufacturers' convention which is being held in Chicago this week.

C. M. Sigler, president of the company, left last Friday for Chicago, where he will exhibit to the manufacturers of pianos the many fine
features of the Sigler piano player.
The Sigler Piano Player Company's
line now consists of three separate and distinct types of piano player actions. The original action was what is known in the plano trade as an
"adaptable" action—that is to say it can be installed in any ordinary
plano in the customer's home,
regardless of the size of the plano case or changing its appearance. This is said by experts in the trade to be the most unique and perfect plano player in the world, and is rapidly putting Harrisburg on the map as a manufacturing center of art
products.

Another type of action made by the Sigler Plano Player Company is what is known in the piano trade as a "single valve" action. This type of action is preferred by many player
player action, which has produced very favorable comment from the fact that it is built along entirely new lines and is bound to meet with a wonderful demand from manufacturers
who perfer this type of action
to the "single valve".

Mr. Bard, the factory superintendent and inventor

The factory is divided into various

pany.

The factory is divided into various departments, among them being the bellows making, action, spool box, mill room, varnishing, tuning, installation room, and packing. The heads of these departments in their order are as follows: Mr. Kaminsheff, H. E. Aughinbaugh and Harry Langletz, Roy Cain, Alfred Stokey, W. H. Brown, W. N. McKinney, Joe Norton and Albert Alleg.

Do You Think She Should Vote?
One of the interesting features of the factory organization is that a woman is acting as inspector in the action making room. It is Mrs. Charles E. Bard, wife of the superintendent, who has been trained in the work by Mr. Bard himself. Mrs. Bard claims that it was directly due to her influence, skill and encouragement that many of the finer points of the actions have been worked out. The offices are under C. W. Prosser, of Steelton. He came to the Sigler Company from the offices of J. C. Shumberger, the expert accountant. Charles C. Stroh is the company's attorney.

The growth of the Sigler Piano Player Company has really been surprising to businessmen and manufacturers throughout the city. It had its inception less than two years ago, when Mr. Bard was associated with C. M. Sigler's piano store, 30 North Second street. The first experiments on the Sigler "adaptable" action were conducted in the repair shop of the Sigler piano store, and when they were found to be successful, Mr. Sigler began the manufacture of the actions in the Forney Bullding, 426-428 Market street. The business so rapidly outgrew its orders that it was found necessary to organize a com-ler began the manufacture of the actions in the Forney Bullding, 426-428. Market street. The business so rapidly outgrew its orders that it was found necessary to organize a company and to erect a factory. Accordingly, last June the Sigler Piano Player Company was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania with a capital stock of $6,000, with C. M. Sigler president, Mr. Bard vice-president and John W. Thompson as treasurer. Later in the year it was again found necessary to increase the capital stock and it was increased to $100,000. Instead of the three directors, under the reorganization a board of five dierctors was elected, which is as follows:

C. M. Sigler, president; Charles E. Board, vice-president; John W. Thompson, treasurer; William Graupner and C. H. Bair, directors, Mr. Graupner is of the well-known Graupner family, which has many business interests throughout the city and at the present time is erecting a big bakery at Tenth and Market streets. Mr. Bair is a big cigar manufacturer. Mr. Thompson, until June of last year, was engaged in the barber supply business. C. M. Sigler has been one of Harrisburg's leading businessmen, being identified with the plano trade here for the last twenty-five years. Mr. Bard has been in the piano and pipeorgan business for many years, being first in the retail and later in the manufacturing ends of the game. He has been identified with some of the leading dealers and manufacturers in the country, among, whom are the Acolian Company of New York, Jardine & Sons of New York, and the Peloubet Company, Mr. Peloubet and Mr. Bard came to Harrisburg to take charge of the repair department of the Sigler store, where the "adaptable" action was worked out.

Officials of the company have received a telegram from Mr. Sigler at Chicago, stating that he is at the Auditorium Hotel, where his exhibits are being shown to the manufacturing central that the samples are attracting more than favorable comment.

The product of the company will be shown at Chicago during the convention and
