MANUEL'S THRONE IS FOREVER LOST

and during his stay in the Portuguese capital he had ample opportunity to study the people, the country, the conditions, economic and political, of the new republic. While he has kept in touch with affairs there since leaving, his information to a large extent has necessarily been gained from the news dispatches. Incidentally it is doubtful if any official on the "Hill" reads the newspapers on the subject of Portugal any more interestedly or carefully than Secretary Woods.

THE SHADOW BEHIND A THRONE

"Spain contains a big percentage of people who are opposed to the monarchy and naturally the Spanish government is desirous of discouraging the republican attitude as much as possible. You see," smiled Secretary Woods, "on one side of Spain is the big French republic, on the other side is the newer republic, Portugal. "Might the present troubles afford an opportunity for the return of the royalist party to power?" Mr. Woods was asked. "Could the friends of Manuel really be behind this revolution?" "No, I don't think so," replied the Secretary. "In fact, I doubt if the royalists will ever regain Portugal's throne. Portugal will ever remain a republic."

When Portugal Holds an Election

Under the previous administration Dr. Costa was premier and did a wonderful amount of good for the people. The president of the Portuguese republic is more or less of a figurehead, the reins of government are in the hands of the premier. Now I understand that Dr. Costa is trying to get his party into power again. "It is said that the purpose of carrying on the revolution at this time is to gain control of the governmental machinery relative to the annual election. Is this true?" "It must be. The whole electoral machinery is controlled by the government and the party that is in power naturally controls the elections. "Someone has written of a great secret organization controlled by the republic which helped to overthrow the throne and which has been revived in these troubles. Had you heard of that?"

The Call of the Fives

"Oh, yes. That is called the 'carbonaro.' It is a wonderful and huge secret society and was formed, it is said, for the purpose of uniting to strike at the proper time at the throne. A curious system of calling the members together exists. The head of the society issues the word to each of five other men. In turn each of the five pass the same instructions on to five others; each of these five in turn tip off five others, and so on until the whole great body has been notified."

Family All Together First Time in 20 Years

The following children and grandchildren of Mrs. Emeline Williams were entertained at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Baker, where she has been an invalid for the past ten months: Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Williams, of Newport; Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Williams, of Pile; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Williams, of Wellsville; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Baker, of Sidetown; Earl and Richard Williams, of Wellsville; Reba, Clara, Hazel and Anna Williams, of Pile; Carrie, Edna, Mary, Glen, Frank and C. M. Baker, Jr., of Sidetown; Mrs. Charles Williams and daughter, Mrs. J. O. Zimmerman, of Dillenburg; and two great-grandchildren. All spent a happy day together, for it was the first time the sister and brothers had met in reunion for twenty years.
