

WHO PAYS

A Committee of Leading Women in Social, Business and Philanthropic Life was called together to pass a verdict upon a series of twelve entirely new human interest stories involving the Twelve Great Questions of Life—Their unanimous opinion was that not only every woman and every young girl, but every man and boy also should read this intensely interesting series. Fascinating in the extreme, but entirely free from sensational rot and slush, these wonderful stories will create a continuous topic of interest in every home, club and debating circle in the land. The first story is entitled the "Price of Fame"

GERMANY SIDESTEPS REAL ISSUES IN REPLY

made public last night follows: "The undersigned has the honor to submit to Ambassador Gerard the following answer to the communication of May 15 regarding the injury to American interests through German submarine warfare.

"The imperial government has subjected the communication of the American government to a thorough investigation. It entertains also a keen wish to co-operate in a frank and friendly way in clearing up a possible misunderstanding which may have arisen in the relations between the two governments through the events mentioned by the American government.

"Regarding, first, the cases of the American steamers Cushing and Gulf-light. The American embassy has already been informed that the German government has no intention of submitting neutral ships in the war zone, which are guilty of no hostile acts, to attacks by a submarine or submarines or aviators. On the contrary, the German forces have repeatedly been instructed most specifically to avoid attacks on such ships.

"If neutral ships in recent months have suffered through the German submarine warfare, owing to mistakes in identification, it is a question only of quite isolated and exceptional cases, which can be attributed to the British government's abuse of flags, together with the suspicious or culpable behavior of the masters of the ships.

"The German government, in all cases in which it has been shown by its investigations that a neutral ship, not itself at fault, was damaged by German submarines or aviators, has expressed regret over the unfortunate accident and, if justified by conditions, has offered indemnification.

Appeal to Hague Suggested

"The cases of the Cushing and the Gulf-light will be treated on the same principles. An investigation of both cases is in progress, the result of which will presently be communicated to the embassy. The investigation can, if necessary, be supplemented by an international call on the International Commission of Inquiry, as provided by Article III of The Hague agreement of October 18, 1907.

"When sinking the British steamer Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of allowing the passengers and crew a full opportunity for a safe escape. Only when the master did not obey the order to heave to, but fled and summoned help by rocket signals, did the German commander order the crew and passengers by signals and megaphone to leave the ship with 10 minutes. He actually allowed them 23 minutes time and fired the torpedo only when suspicious craft were hastening to the assistance of the Falaba.

Sinking of the Lusitania

"Regarding the loss of life by the sinking of the British passenger steamer Lusitania, the German government has already expressed to the neutral governments concerned its keen regret that citizens of their states lost their lives.

"On this occasion the imperial government, however, cannot escape the impression that certain impostors, by having a direct bearing on the sinking of the Lusitania may have escaped the attention of the American government.

"In the interest of a clear and complete understanding, which is the aim of both governments, the imperial government considers it first necessary to convince itself that the information accessible to both governments about the facts of the case is complete and in accord.

"The Government of the United States proceeds on the assumption that the Lusitania could be regarded as an unarmed merchantman. The imperial government allows itself in this connection to point out that the Lusitania was one of the largest and fastest British merchant ships, with government funds as an auxiliary cruiser and carried expressly as such in the 'navy list' issued by the British admiralty.

Charge Lusitania Was Armed

"It is further known to the imperial government, from trustworthy reports from its agents and neutral passengers, that for a considerable time practically all the more valuable British merchantmen have been equipped with cannon and ammunition and other weapons, and manned with persons who have been specially trained in serving guns. The Lusitania, too, according to information received by the imperial government, was armed with cannon aboard, which were mounted and concealed below decks.

"The imperial government, further, has the honor to direct the particular attention of the American government to the fact that the British admiralty, in a confidential instruction issued in February, 1915, recommended its merchant shipping not only to seek protection under the neutral flags and distinguishing marks, but also, while thus disguised, to attack German submarines by raming. As a special invitation to merchantmen to destroy submarines the British government also offered high prizes and has already paid such rewards.

"The imperial government, in view of these facts indubitably known to it, is unable to regard British merchantmen in the zone of naval operations specified by the admiralty staff of the German navy as 'unarmed.' German commanders consequently are no longer able to observe the customary regulations of the prize law, which they before always followed.

"Finally, the imperial government must point out particularly that the Lusitania on its last trip, as on earlier occasions, carried Canadian troops and war material, including no less than 2,400 cases of ammunition intended for the destruction of the brave German soldiers who are fulfilling their duty with self-sacrifice and devotion in the fatherland's service.

"The German government believes that it was acting in justified self-defense in seeking with all the means of warfare at its disposition to protect the lives of its soldiers by destroying ammunition intended for the enemy.

Blame Placed on Cunard Line

"The British shipping company must have been aware of the danger to which the passengers aboard the Lusitania were exposed under these conditions. The company in embarking them, notwithstanding this, attempted deliberately to use the lives of American citizens as protection for the ammunition aboard, and acted against the clear provisions of the American law, which expressly prohibits the forwarding of passengers on ships carrying ammunition, and provides a penalty therefor. The company, therefore, is wittingly guilty of the death of so many passengers.

"There can be no doubt, according to the definite report of the submarine's commander, which is further confirmed by all other information, that the quick sinking of the Lusitania is primarily attributable to the explosion of the ammunition shipment caused by a torpedo. The Lusitania's passengers would otherwise, in all human probability, have been saved.

American Efforts Appreciated

"The imperial government considers the above-mentioned facts important enough to recommend them to the attentive examination of the American government.

"The imperial government, while withholding its final decision on the demands advanced by connection with the sinking of the Lusitania until receipt of an answer from the American government, feels impelled, in conclusion, to recall here and now that it took cognizance with satisfaction of the mediator proposals submitted by the United States government to Berlin and London as a basis for a modus vivendi for conducting the maritime

TODAY we meet at the graves of the heroes of our country with all the tenderness of funeral rites, with all the dignity of purpose, but without the pain and sadness of years ago.

Time has softened the bereavement, but it has enriched the memories.

While our great armies have grown less, our hills and valleys have grown richer in association.

When the roll call to arms faded in sound, the roll of honor began. When the white tents were folded on the battlefield the white markers of commemoration in our cemeteries began.

Without reference to religion, to race, to nationality, we, on Memorial Day, mark mounds with the emblems of sentiment and patriotism.

What a wonderful inheritance—what a tremendous responsibility rests on the present generation—a responsibility to peace, and of protection, if need be.

Warfare between Germany and Great Britain

"The imperial government, by its readiness to enter upon a discussion of these proposals, then demonstrated its good intentions in ample fashion. The realization of these proposals was defeated, as is well known, by the declinatory attitude of the British government.

"The undersigned takes occasion, etc.

WHILE GRAND ARMY PASSES IN REVIEW

placed over the "little green tents," and the sides of the firing squad had echoed over the last "campground," and the bugles had called "taps" again, the thousands of folks trolleyed, tramped, motored, drove or strolled, to the cemetery, to be put in the remainder of a holiday as well as the weatherman and their Memorial Day plans would permit.

When the Bells Told

Aside from the part of the old soldiers bore in paying the tribute, Harrisburg observed the day in much the same old way. In the churches yesterday there was much of the occasion's significance in sermon and in song. In several places of worship the veterans attended services. At noon, of course, the churches and the Courthouse, and even some of the firehouses, tolled their bells for five minutes. And if you were a self-respecting patriotic sort of citizen you paused and removed your hat.

The Band Concerts

The big thing in a municipal way on the program was the band concerts at Reservoir. The Municipal Band pounded out its first concert of the season this afternoon, and this evening there will be another by the same band from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Scores of baseball games were on during afternoon and morning and tennis and golf occupied hundreds of enthusiasts at the country clubs, both the Harrisburg and the Colonial, and at Reservoir, Island and Twelfth street. During this afternoon there was no golf on the Reservoir links, however, as it was deemed safer not to permit playing when there were so many hundreds of people in the park. At the country clubs and at a score of nearby dancing resorts there were afternoon programs and more of it scheduled for to-night.

The Army Passes

At 1.45 o'clock the parade, including the veterans of Posts 58, 118 and 520, the veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Sons of Veterans, Boy Scouts and other military organizations, including the Governor's Troop and Companies D and I of the State Guard infantry, and policemen, moved down Second street from State with Chief Marshal E. B. Hoffman at its head. There was the usual string of motor cars bearing the veterans who could no longer march. And the train of autos was a little longer than last year and a little longer than the year before; next year there'll be more autos.

Down Second, out Market, thence to the Mulberry street bridge, over the bridge to Thirteenth—where a detachment left to go to the Mount Calvary Cemetery—and then on up Thirteenth street to the entrance to Harrisburg Cemetery. And when the right of the line reached the gates the band swung in to the funeral march from Saul.

The Salute of "Sleeping Soldiers" As the marching men passed the long rows of perfectly aligned graves that somehow reminded one ever so much of sleeping soldiers, the rifles were reversed. The fluttering flags on the graves might have been the passing salute of the marchers who had gone before.

The memorial services at the cemetery were more than ordinarily impressive and then came the salutes and then "taps."

Dr. Fox Tells Academy Seniors How to Succeed

Members of the graduating class of the Harrisburg Academy with the faculty attended baccalaureate services in Grace Methodist Church last evening. The Rev. Dr. John D. Fox preached the sermon. He emphasized the importance of honesty, obedience and faithfulness to a steadfast purpose.

PARK WELL POLLUTED

Warning was issued to the public by the health department not to drink from the wells in Cameron Extension parkway, as it has been found that one at least of the parkway wells is polluted with typhoid bacilli. The infected well was closed to-day.
