

Glad to Recommend Fruitola and Traxo

Mrs. Norforth Says She Suffered with Gall-stones for Several Years Without Relief

MRS. ROSA NORFORTH

In a letter to the Pinus laboratories, Mrs. Rosa Norforth, Monticello, Ill., says: "I cannot praise Fruitola and Traxo too highly as I consider it saved my life. I suffered with gall-stones for several years and could not get any relief until your preparation was recommended to me. It has been six months since I took the last bottle and I feel that I am entirely well. Have anyone doubting the merit of your preparation write me as I will be only too glad to recommend Fruitola and Traxo to anyone suffering from gall-stones."

Fruitola and Traxo are the names used to identify two preparations that are taken in combination. Fruitola acts on the intestinal organs as a powerful lubricant, softening congested masses and disintegrating the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, and expelling the accumulation with almost instant relief. Traxo is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach with most beneficial results and is recommended in connection with Fruitola to build up and restore the system that has become run down and weakened through the suffering incident to the derangement of the digestive organs.

In the files of the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., are many letters gratefully acknowledging the satisfactory results following the use of Fruitola and Traxo. Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these excellent remedies by leading drug stores everywhere. In Harrisburg, Fruitola and Traxo can be obtained from Gorgas, the druggist, 16 North Third street and P. R. R. Station.

ROMPERS OF A NOVEL SORT

A Useful Little Garment That Can be Made in Two Entirely Different Ways.

By MAY MANTON

8651 Child's Rompers, 3 to 6 years.

Rompers have become such established features of the small child's wardrobe that new designs are always in demand. These can be made with the body portion making a complete little garment or with only the trousers and suspenders to keep them in place. Also the body portion can be made with high, square or round neck and with long or short sleeves and it would seem as though there were included all the possibilities that could be demanded of such a simple garment. In the picture, striped galatea is trimmed with plain and it is doubtful if any material is better adapted to the purpose, but gingham is used, chambray makes pretty and useful rompers and any material that is simple, durable and washable is appropriate. The plain body portion is closed at the back, the trousers are buttoned to it by means of a belt and are closed at the sides. When suspenders are used, they are adjusted over the shoulders and buttoned to the belt. In the little back view, blue linen is shown with the edges scalloped with white and besides being practical, the rompers made in that way are exceptionally attractive and becoming. Striped galatea is durable and also has a smartness of its own.

For the 4 year size will be required 2 3/4 yds. of material 27 in. wide, 1 3/4 yds. 36 or 44 in. wide, with 3/8 yd. 27 for the trimming.

The pattern 8651 is cut in sizes for 2, 4 and 6 years. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

BRYAN SENDS NOTE TO AMERICAN PEOPLE

of that day "when swords shall be beaten into plowshares."

Text of Statement

The text of Mr. Bryan's statement follows:

To the American People:

You now have before you the text of the note to Germany—the note which it would have been my official duty to sign had I remained Secretary of State. I ask you to sit in judgment upon my decision to resist rather than to share responsibility for it. I am sure you will credit me with honorable motives, but that is not enough. Good intentions could not alone for a mistake at such a time, on such a subject and under such circumstances.

If your verdict is against me, I ask my mercy. I desire none if I have acted unwisely. A man in public life must act according to his conscience, but however conscientiously he acts, he must be prepared to accept without complaint any condemnation which his own errors may bring upon him; he must be willing to bear any deserved punishment from ostracism to execution. But hear me before you pass sentence.

The President and I agree in purpose; we desire a peaceful solution of the dispute which has arisen between the United States and Germany. I rely for vindication wholly upon the strength of the position taken.

Among the influences which governments employ in dealing with each other there are two which are pre-eminently antagonistic—force and persuasion. Force speaks with firmness and acts through the ultimatum; persuasion employs argument, courts misapprehensions and depends upon negotiation. Force represents the old system—the system that must pass away; persuasion represents the new system—the system that has been growing and spreading slowly, it is true, but growing for 1900 years.

In the old system war is the chief cornerstone—war which at its worst; the new system contemplates an universal brotherhood established through the uplifting power of example.

Fears Note to Germany Means War.

If I correctly interpret the note to Germany, it conforms to the standards of the old system rather than to the rules of the new, and I cheerfully admit that it is abundantly supported by precedent—precedent written in characters of blood upon almost every page of human history. Austria furnishes the most recent precedent; it was Austria's firmness that dictated the ultimatum against Serbia, which set the world at war. Every ruler now participating in this unparalleled conflict has proclaimed his desire for peace and denied responsibility for the war, and it is only charitable that we should credit all of them with good faith.

They desired peace, but they sought it according to the rules of the old system. They believed that firmness would give the best assurance of the maintenance of peace and, faithfully following precedent, they went so near the fire that they were, one after another, sucked into the contest.

Never before have the frightful follies of this fatal system been so clearly revealed as now. The most civilized and enlightened—aye, the most Christian—of the nations of

Women and Their Interests

Man's Duty to Teach Wife to Be His Partner

Ellis Wheeler Wilcox

Since the home is the foundation of the nation, it is well worth while for individuals who establish homes to make some personal sacrifice of time and impulse, to create a solid bed rock for that foundation.

The lover finds it easy to show an interest in the most frivolous or feminine accomplishment of his lady love; to admire her embroidery; to listen to her singing or to help her fix up her booth for a charity bazaar. And whatever she says or does wins his attention. Why not continue that attitude after marriage and give the wife the happy sense of co-partnership in all her doings?

Every wife, as a rule, is ready to be taught something of her husband's business or professional affairs; enough to make her understand his ambitions and sympathies with his trials. But it is only the occasional wife who has the perception to understand the delicate difference between sympathizing and interfering with a man's affairs. Perhaps it is because of this sense of interference that so few men make their wives acquainted with their business lives. And this is a point on which women need training.

A tactful man can so train the woman he loves, before marriage, by praise of other women who have shown the art of helping their husbands by the right attitude of understanding and the right methods of action. Surely there is nothing too much trouble, nothing too time-taking, which may lead to a successful marriage? It is the important work of the human race. For what is the worth of successful or unsuccessful peace, power and prosperity in a nation, what is the use of international arbitration unless that nation is founded on happy, clean, harmonious homes?

One danger which menaces the American and menaces happy home life, is the alarming tendency of the present generation to avoid parenthood.

Young married people in good health, with good brains and bodies to transmit to offspring, and wives who might be the proud mothers of statesmen and beautiful daughters, frequently impair their health and beauty rather than accept the responsibilities of motherhood.

Here again we find the reflex action of mind; for these wives are daughters of mothers who have borne too many children and have missed the happiness of youth and the relaxation a perfect home should give. In the never-ceasing cares of a large family, I do not know what the young state regarding the relative number of divorces among childless people and those who are parents, but I do know that Nature intended marriage to be followed by parenthood as naturally as summer follows spring.

And I know that even the sad experience of motherhood which lasts but a few brief hours often makes a new and indescribably sacred bond of affection between man and wife. There are many happy marriages where no children are, it is true, yet the wife who has never felt the stirring of a little being under her heart has missed one of life's and love's most wonderful experiences.

They walked the valley of the dead;

Lit by a weird half light;

No sound they made, no word they said;

And they were pale with fright.

Then suddenly from unseen places

Loud laughter that was like a whip of flame.

They looked, and saw, beyond, above,

A land where wronged souls wait

(Those spirits called by love,

And driven back by hate).

And each one stood in anguish dumb

And wild.

As she beheld the phantom of her child.

Yea, saw the soul her wish had hurried

Out into night and death

Before it reached the Mother world.

Or drew its natural breath.

And, terrified, each hid her face and fled

Beyond the presence of her unborn dead.

And God's Great Angel, who provides

Souls for our mortal land,

Laughed, with the laughter that delights,

At that fast feeling band

Of self-made barren women of the earth.

(Hell has no curse that withers like such mirth).

"O Angel, tell us who were they

That down below us fared,

Those shapes with faces strained and gray?

And eyes that stared and stared;

Something there was about them gave us fear?

Yet are we lonely, now they are not here?"

Thus spake the spectral children; thus

The Angel made reply:

"They have no part or share with us,

They were but passers-by."

"But may we pray for them?" the phantoms plead.

"Yes, for they need your prayers," the Angel said.

They went upon their lonely way

(Far, far from Paradise);

Their path was lighted with wan rays

From ghostly children's eyes.

The little children who were never born;

And as they passed, the Angel laughed

In scorn.

Wash a pair of "cut price" silk gloves then a pair of Kaiser's. The difference in their appearance after one washing will show you why there are more Kaiser gloves worn than all other silk gloves combined.

THE SAFE WAY TO WASH SILK GLOVES

Use only cold water and any pure soap. Rinse well and wring out in a towel but do not twist. Pull lengthwise, turn inside out and lay flat to dry. Do not hang up and never let a hot touch them.

Europe are grappling with each other as if in a death struggle. They are sacrificing the best and bravest of their sons on the battlefield; they are converting their gardens into cemeteries and their homes into houses of mourning; they are taxing the wealth of to-day and laying a burden of debt on the toll of the future; they have filled the air with thunderbolts more deadly than those of Jove and they have multiplied the perils of the deep.

Adding fresh fuel to the flame of hate, they have daily devised new horrors, until one side is endeavoring to drown non-combatant men, women and children at sea, while the other man, women and children on land.

And they are so absorbed in alternate retaliations and in competitive cruelties that they seem, for the time being, blind to the rights of neutrals and deaf to the appeals of humanity.

A tree is known by its fruit. The war in Europe is the ripened fruit of the old system.

This is what firmness, supported by force, has done in the old world; shall we invite it to cross the Atlantic? Already the jingoes of our own country have caught the rabies from the dogs of war; shall the opponents of organized slaughter be silent while the disease spreads?

As an humble follower of the Prince of Peace, as a devoted believer in the prophecy that "they that take the sword shall perish with the sword," I beg to be counted among those who earnestly urge the adoption of a course in this matter which will leave no doubt of our government's willingness to continue negotiations with Germany until an amicable understanding is reached, or at least until, the stress of war is over, we can appeal from Philip drunk with carnage to Philip sobered by the memories of an historic friendship and by a recollection of the innumerable ties of kinship that bind the Fatherland to the United States.

Some nation must lead the world out of the black night of war into the light of that day when "swords shall be beaten into plowshares." Why not make that honor ours? Some day—why not now?—the nations will learn that enduring peace cannot be built upon fear—that good will does not grow upon the stalk of violence. Some day the nations will place their trust in love, the weapon for which there is no shield; in love, that suffereth long and is kind; in love, that is not easily provoked, that beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things; in love which, though despised as weakness by the worshippers of Mars, abideth when all else fails.

W. J. BRYAN.
