

CHURCHES OBSERVING CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL

Boys and Girls Will Hold Center of Interest in Nearly All Edifices Tomorrow

Hundreds of small boys and girls, clad in white will participate in Children's Day services in more than a score of churches throughout the city. These services will vie in interest with the baccalaureate sermons which will be preached to the Seniors of Technical and Central high schools.

Motion songs, drills and exercises, solos and recitations by primary and kindergarten pupils will, as usual prove of the most interest. Choral numbers in many instances greatly augmented, will sing special music.

Arrangements have been made to have all the churches decorated with a profusion of Spring flowers. Baptism of infants and receptions to new members will also be features of a majority of services.

HARRIS STREET PROGRAM

In the Harris Street United Evangelical Church the morning will be devoted to a special program by the candle roll, beginners and primary departments. The first one was voted and another agreed upon and put through in the final ten days of the session. It affords a means of correcting tenement abuses and is said to be advanced legislation.

In his statement the Governor says: "In my veto of the repealer of the housing code of 1913, which code related to Philadelphia alone, I made the suggestion that the parties interested should get together and agree upon a just and fair code for the city. This they have done and the present bill (Senate 1,520) is the outcome. Since its passage I have communicated with the city's director of public health and charities, and with the finance committee of councils. They have unhesitatingly agreed that if this bill became a law they will immediately create the housing department provided for in this bill. Councils have given me positive assurance that the bill will be at once appropriated and the director has agreed that the department will be immediately organized. With these facts definitely on record I have approved this bill, and Philadelphia can now go forward in the matter of proper housing for its people. The sooner it does so the better. This housing problem is of vast significance now. I mean to make it more significant in the future. I shall follow the work in Philadelphia with great interest."

EVANGELIST TO PREACH

Evangelist C. E. Hillis, who is closing a successful campaign in Steelton, will be at once appropriated and the director has agreed that the department will be immediately organized. This housing problem is of vast significance now. I mean to make it more significant in the future. I shall follow the work in Philadelphia with great interest."
