The Direct Relation

Between What We Eat and What We Are Is Well Established

This is both reasonable and scientific, for activity uses up tissue cells of body and brain which must be replaced daily from proper food.

A careful eater—one who selects food for its nutritional value—is usually strong in body and keen in mind.

Thousands of people, with an eye to nutritional values in food, are using

The door of No. 492 trembled vio-lently then lunged from its hinges and the two policemen leaped into the office. The clod that had been Charles Leed, investment broker, sprawled in a swivel chair, his head and the right hand, still gripping the revolver, reaching nerviessly out upon the lit-

The desk blotter was still a bit damp. A newspaper scare-head there had been heavily marked by a 6B lead

A tiny memorandum slip, torn hurriedly from a book, with the names of the city's twelve principal banks and trust companies lay upon the floor. And that was all.

The Mirfor's police reporter slipped into their puzzled conference. A likable enough chap in idle moments, they regarded him now, askance, as wholesome men regard a buzzard.
And a buzzard he was in very truth,
his hands eagerly fluttering through the suicide's clothes, picking up articles upon the deek, holding the blotter
to the mirror above the wash bowl, sniffing the very air as though he found a peculiarly pleasant fragrance hovering about this place of death.

"Sergeant told me a man 'phoned

he explained. "What do you boys

"Well, you've got to hand it to the make of it?"

"Well, you've got to hand it to the guy—he made good," Officer Carney answered. "Ought to make a big story, Harvey. Leed was dirty with money—wasn't he?"

The reporter smiled at the inference that a suicide never takes the biggest jump until his money is gone. Inwardly, he was laughing at their bewilderment. A good story? Why, it was a whale, a triple-decker of a story! And a story plainly written!

Charles Leed, the eminently wealthy investment broker, had been the Mysterious Unknown who shoveled millions so carelessly into the smashed ship company. With the last glimmering of hope he had written the wealthy heiress, Miss Selma Ashton, that her millions had been a part of those swept away. But why Selma Ashton unless she had made a recent demand for money that hastened the climax? The blotter, turned upside down against the mirror, had spelled out the substance of the broker's last note. He consulted again the memorandum slip. Undoubtedly, he had it correctly. Leed was the mysterious backer of the Titan Company. The Titan Company smashed. Selma Ashton inconveniently required money. Leed tackled the banks and trust companies mentioned on the slip for aid but without success. Then—a subject for the coroner.

Mrs. Pressley's lips compressed as she read David Dwight's note. The thought of his marriage to the beau-tiful creature just across the tea tiful creature just across the tea things was repugnant to her. Selma Ashton checked the laugh upon her lips, a regulsh gleam light-ing her eyes. Under lowered lashes she mused aloud.

uncertain, whether to assume an air of injured dignity or to join in the mirth.

"You dear old thing!" Selma gasped. "Of course, I haven't any idea of marrying him. In the first place he's old, and in the second place he's not the man I want, and in the third place he isn't the man I want to marry and never could be. But you were so funny when you thought me in earnest. Just for that I'll forgive your scolding about my asking Mr. Leed to send me a hundred thousand doilars. Now, we must be ready to receive the eager wooer."

Her companion ordered the butler to clear the tea table, then slowly followed the beautiful girl up the stairs. She never quite knew how to take the heiress, how to fathom her moods, her fads and fancies. Still it was good o know that her riches, her wild extravagances, her luxurious self-indulgence had not warped her soul when it came to the big things, the things that went toward making eternal happiness or misery for herself.

She could hear Selma dismissing her maid and moved into the hall, accompanying her to the drawing room. She hurriedly started to withdraw at / lutter of the door-bell but halted faquiringly as the butler entered with a note for his mistress.

The companion gazed with increasing wonderment at the young heiress. A few moments before she had walked down the stairs with the radiant creature, a happy, care-free girl. And now, in the space of time it took for her eyes to travel across the lines of a briefly scrawled note, all the girlishness had faded away, leaving the hard, speculative expression there of a cold, calculating scheming woman.
