GOV. BRUMBAUGH AT DEDICATION

Strong Address By Executive at Ceremonies When Huntingdon Receives New Federal Building

Huntingdon, Pa., June 18.—Governor Brumbaugh was the central figure in the dedication of the new federal building yesterday, which was one of Huntingdon's greatest occasions. Governor Brumbaugh gave a characteristically strong address in the form of "A Talk to His Home Folks." He referred to the occasion as one of double importance because it had brought to Huntingdon a high representative of the federal government and the Governor of the State. He then launched upon his theme, which was an account of how the post office service had been developed since the days of Benjamin Franklin, first Postmaster General of the United States, and of John Cadwalader, postmaster of Huntingdon at the time it was yet an Indian trading post until the more recent period when he himself was connected with the postal service, carrying mail from Markiesburg to his father's store at the munificent salary of $40 per year.
