WHO PAYS?

Unto Herself Alone
By EDWIN BLISS

John Halstead's hands trembled as he shut his desk. Very slowly the roll top unfolded, reluctantly shutting out neat stacks of papers and correspondence, the paper-weight of another period, the quill pens, the rusty ink-wells, all the commonplaces of a man's work. Moisture gathered in the king's eyes. Old friends they were, friends with whom he had spent his best 30 years. Together they had fought and suffered, together they had lost and won countless victories and skirmishes. And now the separation hour had come. Halstead was through.

The old lion had finished with a victory, but one so bitterly fought he realized another battle would mean inevitable defeat. The young whelps of this Wall Street jungle had grown so formidable that when they fell upon him the issue had been a long time in doubt. But he had won. But at the price of a broken spirit and body and a bitter regret. And so it was in no pleasant mood that he arrived home.

He stepped softly into his home, moving toward the library. He wanted to be alone to compose himself, to readjust himself to the conditions of an altered existence. He did not wish wife or daughter to see him in the hour when he was forced to look upon the borders of the end.

John Halstead Orders His Daughter Never to See Her Sweetheart Again.

A note lay upon the desk and he picked it up, absently glancing over the brief writing. He turned the sheet and, as his eyes fell upon the signature, a wild ferocious gleam flamed up within them. He reached out and clutched the desk for support, clutched so tightly the knuckles gleamed a shiny blue-black. Mastering himself with an effort he dispatched a servant for his wife and daughter, still standing in the same position when they entered the room, the note in his hands, such an expression of hatred and inflexible determination upon his face as caused them to halt abruptly, checking their affectionate greetings.

"You have answered this man, Esther?" Straight to the point he put out, his voice shaking a trifle with the rage he masterfully held in check. As she did not answer, he slowly crumpled the paper in the palm of his hand, letting it drop to the floor. The hurt expression in her eyes broke his control.

"Then you shall answer it—now. Do you know that Felix Lynn is the man I have just beaten, that he tried to ruin me, that he has worn out the last atom of my strength, that the fight has forced me to retire? Felix Lynn is the man who has just failed in his attempt to ruin this household. And Felix Lynn is the man who has the audacity to invite a member of this household to christen his new yacht? Felix Lynn must be a stranger to this door. You will neither speak to him nor have any communication with him. And you will give him to understand that—NOW—Esther is no longer, but at a significant gesture from her mother, wrote the fateful note:

Felix dear: Father stumbled on your note and raised such a storm it will be impossible for mother and me to christen your yacht. We must be so careful, you know. Why not ask Alice and her mother to go? ESTHER.

II.

The smouldering rebellion that had been banked so long within the very soul of Alice, leaped suddenly into full flame. For just a second, as she defiantly faced her mother, she had shrunk away from its heat, then everything was swept aside as she realized that now was the time for final assertion in the manner in which she proposed to live her life. Mrs. Knight indolently resumed her book, unconscious of the crisis she had precipitated by her refusal to allow her daughter to christen Felix Lynn's yacht, heedless of the hurt she had inflicted. She looked up as Alice stamped her foot.

"I tell you I shall go. I told him over the phone that I was coming, and I am. If you would chaperone me I'll go alone. I'm sick and tired of silly conventions hedging me away from everything I want to do. It's my life I'm living and I'm not going to live it for the world but for myself."

Mrs. Knight frowned slightly as the girl stormed away, then resumed her reading. So gradual had been the increasing violence of Alice's rebellions she did not realize how close they stood to the brink of the precipice. She looked up again as her daughter stood, framed in the doorway, a yachting cap tilted a little defiantly upon her pretty head.

"I'm going to the yacht," Alice announced.

Mrs. Knight rose swiftly. There had been something incisive, decisive and unbending about the way Alice announced her destination that revealed a vision of herself many years before. She, too, had been rebellious, and it was the very violence of her own nature that made her so fearful of breaking the conventions, realizing the untold lengths to which she might go once started. Alice laughed lightly and closed the door behind her.

The launching was a success, and after it was over handsome Felix Lynn took Alice home. The butler met her at the door and handed out this note:

The Citizens were victors in a swiftest scoring a score over Rely, score 13 to 6. Camp Curtin had a close contest with Allison winning by a score of 6 to 3. With the Advent of Summer, More Care Must Be Given to Food and the Way It Is Preserved Proper refrigeration is the first essential, and care should also be given to the style of refrigerator purchased.

The one-piece stone lining with round corners affords no place for germs to lodge and breed.

WATER SUPPLY TO PLAN IMMENSE DAM

Governor Approves the Appropriation For Pymatuning Swamp Reservoir Project

Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh's approval of the appropriation of $57,000 for the work of the State Water Supply Commission on the Pymatuning Swamp reservoir project will enable the commission to commence work on the designs for the reservoir and to secure options on properties. The appropriation is in fact a re-appropriation of a balance which would otherwise have lapsed and insures continuation of the work which will eventually mean so much to the industrial communities of Lawrence, Beaver and Mercer counties.

The commission finished its survey and borings last year and during the winter the engineers worked on details. The drawing of plans for the reservoir will be started soon and arrangements made for buying properties. The next legislature, which meets in 1917, will be asked to provide for construction.

continue it piecemeal. Fifteen men who have been engaged upon this work will be dropped on July 15. The preliminaries for the inventory, which was planned to outline what the State will have in the water supply and water power and to recommend ways of practical conservation have been made. The late John Birkinbine gave special attention to the outline and his ideas were followed out.

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

These days the face needs special care and attention. Flying dust and dirt, the beating sun, are severe on any skin. Their despoiling effects are best overcome by the application of pure merozized wax. This keeps skin and pores in a cleanly condition, the complexion beautifully white and spotless. Discolored, freckled and roughened cuticle are actually absorbed by it. One ounce of merozized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to completely renovate a soiled complexion. It is used like cold cream, allowed to remain on over night, and washed off in the morning. As the skin tends to expand in warm weather, causing wrinkles to form, a good astringent lotion should be used. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered succinate in 1/2 pt. witch hazel. Bathe the face in this during the heat of the day or before going out for theater or social affair. It is a remarkable skin tightener and wrinkle eraser.—Advertisement.
