FOUND SUIT ON ROAD

Box Containing Clothing Had Been Lost from Automobile. Lewisberry, June 22.—On Saturday night while Augustus Strayer an employe on Meadowbrook farm, was on his way home from Lewisberry, about 10 o'clock, he saw a suit box lying along the road. In attempting to kick it out of the way he felt some weight in it and picking it up took it to the house. On examination he found that it contained a good suit of clothing. The only thing in the box to identify the owner was a receipt indicating that Wise Brothers, carriage builders, of Lewisberry, had received money from Luther Smith for buggy repairs. On Sunday morning, Mr. Strayer took the receipt to Elmer E. Wise, who at once phoned to Luther Smith, of near Rossville and soon learned that he had lost a case or box containing a suit of clothing on Sunday evening on his way home. In a short time Mr. Smith arrived at Meadowbrook farm in his automobile and handed Mr. Strayer a reward.

Inquiry May Follow Tragedy at Seashore

Atlantic City, N. J., June 22.—Reverberating from the first shock of the appalling tragedy enacted on the Chelsea beach when seven Philadelphians died in the grip of an irresistible undertow, Atlantic City talked of an investigation. With the sea still holding the bodies of four of the victims, Miss Marion Rhodes Creamer, of Jenkintown, Philadelphia, Jr., who lost her life in a heroic attempt to save two men unknown to him; Frank Brigham, who sank while fighting to save a lad two years his junior, and Charles Matlack, who perished with Miss Creamer, a wave of criticism of the guards' work and the failure of resort officials to rush a larger force to the danger point swept the town. Men of affairs, who declined to permit the use of their names, and others of less standing, who admitted they knew little at first hand of the exact details, declared there must be an official explanation as to why the lives of scores of persons caught in a death trap were left dependent upon two guards. Many are trying to make capital out of the fact that William H. Bartlett, director of public safety, was out of the city Sunday. Others insist that places like the slough at Chelsea avenue should have been designated by danger signals. It is maintained also that there should be more effective means of hastily summoning an adequate force of guards to meet just such an emergency as occurred.

CENTRAL LEAGUE MAY ADOPT HARRISBURG

Plans Under Consideration For Cheaper Baseball When Big Team Is Traveling

While Harrisburg fans are anxiously awaiting the final answer on the Newark transfer, officials of the Harrisburg Independent team are considering important plans for future baseball. Strong bids are being made for Harrisburg as a part of one of the nearby leagues. Backers of the Independents are of the opinion that a team in the Blue Ridge League would be a good investment. However, it is more than likely that the Central Pennsylvania League will select Harrisburg. This would mean 15-cent baseball. In the event of Harrisburg taking over a Central franchise there would be no interference with the games in the International League should Newark be transferred. A schedule would be arranged to give Harrisburg games at home when the big team is on the road.
