LORD CURZON DENIES MILK BARGAIN

Says Prices Are Lower and Deliveries Surer Through American Banking Firm. By Associated Press. London, June 24.—That the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., as agents of the British government in America received a commission of two per cent. and all expenses, but have had no money to pay for the purchase of the British government has been that in consequence of arrangements with the Morgan firm, American supplies of ammunition were obtained more cheaply than previously, with earlier delivery, was the announcement made by Lord Curzon in the House of Lords last night. Lord Curzon made this statement in replying to criticisms of Lord Davenport, who complained that Canadian firms ready to supply munitions had been referred to the Morgan company and desired to drop that channel. Davenport asserted also that Canadian firms had been told all government contracts already had been placed, and that the statement in which he said a Canadian firm thus rebuffed had applied at Petrograd and instantly obtained an order for 5,000,000 shells.

MILK SUPPLIES ARE UNSATISFACTORY

(Continued from First Page) that he was only going through the form of pasteurization. He notified the proprietor that unless improvement was shown very soon he would refuse him permission to sell milk in this city. Where Filth Abounds. On the farm where the typhoid patient is confined the building conditions, according to the inspectors are exceedingly filthy. The water in the hill stands the barn. The yard is thick with manure and filth abounds, a dead chicken with its bones decaying being sighted in the barn. The water in the side of the barn and a short distance down the hill is the house. In front of this and still further down the hill is a pig pen and a chicken coop and still further down the hill is a toilet. Drainage from all of these places naturally, in time, finds its way to a little gully at the foot of the hill and along this gully is the spring where the tenants on the farm get their drinking water and where they wash their milk cans and cool their milk. The land drains into a branch of Paxton Creek, which in turn overflows its banks its waters are also carried in to the spring, and it is at such a place that milk cans which carry milk to the babies of Harrisburg are washed on the farm. Tenant Has Typhoid. At the present time, however, the cows are not being milked on the farm, not because of the existing conditions, but because the tenant on the farm has typhoid fever. The cows are now at a nearby farm where they are being milked regularly and their milk is being sent to the dealer in a nearby city, where it is sold to hundreds of families in this city. When the tenant recovers from his illness the department of health will not permit him to take his cows back to the farm until conditions are improved. The stables at the present time, and from indications have been for some time past, are in a most unclean and filthy condition. Where Things Are Different. The inspection party next traveled to a farm near Shoop's church where conditions were found altogether different. The stables and barn yard were clean and the water in the barn was whitewashed and running along the edge of the stalls was a trough to carry off the filth. Concrete walks were laid in the stables and outside and little concrete cones were laid against the owner of that place. The milk house, located a few steps from the barn was well kept and improved machinery was used in the entire place one of the best found in this city. The farmer brings his milk to this city and delivers it himself. The next visit was made to a dealer in a borough near Harrisburg who buys much of the milk produced on the farms in that vicinity. He has no farm of his own, but he has a pasteurization method which Dr. Raunick said were inadequate, the dealer has a man working for him who is not in the best physical condition, and yesterday the dealer intended to have the employee produce a certificate from a physician if he continues to work there. The dealer advertised that his milk was pasteurized and produced under the most sanitary conditions but right in his own plant that are many things which must be improved if he were to continue his sale of milk in Harrisburg. The milk is placed in a tank before it is sent through the pasteurization machine. This tank is without a cover and yesterday the inspection party found dozens of dead flies floating about in the milk. Proper pasteurization takes only a few minutes and a tank where pasteurization has been advertised as the key note, it is only carried on in form, according to the health bureau. The public buys the milk, believing it to be pasteurized, said Dr. Raunick, "but in reality it is nothing more than ordinary raw milk, some of which comes from farms where frightful conditions exist. In the same plant yesterday the inspectors found stilted milk with sediment in the bottom. Trips to Neville. Yesterday afternoon a trip was made to a farm near Neville, the owner of which shipped milk to the dealer in this city until he was notified to quit by the Department of Health. In front of this man's barn is a pool of water, the result of a rain storm, and this pool has no outlet and untouched it has become an excellent malaria and mosquito "park." The cows of the farm were about in it and their udders become covered with the filth, some of which must undoubtedly get into the milk pails. The stable is dirty and the barn yard has not been cleaned for months, from all appearances. Manure, which now must have lost its fertilizing properties covers the yard to a depth of two feet in some places. A few feet from the corner of the yard is a cistern where the milk cans are washed. There is no spring or well on the farm and all the water that can be procured is that which runs off the barn roof into a spout and then into the cistern. The tenants on the farm use this same water for drinking and cooking purposes. Dr. Raunick will not permit the farmer to send any more of his milk here until more sanitary conditions exist. The farm is without any man-living seven hours in an air-tight box. Philadelphia, June 24.—With a little suitcase full of chemicals, for the possession of which nations may some time bid fortunes, William S. Bond, a 28-year-old chemist of Wilmington, Del., yesterday climbed into a 36 cubic foot air-tight box and allowed himself to be submerged into a tank of water for more than seven hours, at the end of which time he emerged in good condition. Professor Abraham Henwood, instructor in chemistry at the Drexel Institute, who witnessed Bond's experiment, stated that in his opinion a man could stay in the box approximately four hours without losing consciousness. The experiment, which took place in the mechanical engineering laboratory of the Drexel Institute, and which was witnessed by Captain Linn S. Bond, of the bureau of naval construction of Cramp's shipyard; Lieutenant N. D. Fedotoff, the junior naval attaché of the Russian embassy, and Abraham Henwood, professor of chemistry of the Drexel Institute, was to demonstrate the power of Bond's discovery to purify air by the absorption of poisonous gases thrown off by the lungs. According to Captain Bond, such a discovery, if entirely applicable, would be of immense value in purifying the air in submarines and allowing them to stay submerged for a long time. Change in Ship's Name Results in Her Sinking. Christiania, via London, June 24, 4:50 a. m.—That it is very dangerous to change the name of a ship is demonstrated by the sinking of the Norwegian Shipping Gazette from the attack upon the ship Davanger by a German submarine. The Davanger, formerly the Ceylon and the latter name appeared on the ship's papers. The submarine stopped the Davanger and demanded the vessel's name and nationality. He asked also for the ship's papers. When he observed the conflict in names, he declared the Davanger not only was sailing under a false name, but a false flag. He gave the crew fifteen minutes to leave then fired on the ship. MANY HARRISBURGERS VISIT NEW YORK CITY. Frank A.
