One dealer, who receives his mill from many sources and who has his place of business in a nearby borough is one of those against whom prosecu-tion will most likely be made. He has been advertising pasteurized milk ex-tensively of late and samples taken from him during the past week and given a bacteriological test prove con-clusively that his milk is not pasteurized and that it is far from the stand-ard adopted in Harrisburg. The test made at the city laboratories shows the presence of 660,000 bacteria to a cubic centimeter.

On the majority of the farms visited yesterday, the inspectors found adequate cooling systems, good facilities for washing cans in a sanitary way and facilities which permitted clean milking. Many of the farmers, instead of using the open-top milk pale, use a bucket which is partly povered. This necessarily means that less dust and dirt can get into the milk. A number of good strainers were found and also several separators of modern construction.

One Violator

The worst farm found was one near Shiremanstown where manure is piled in the barnyard to a depth of several feet. A redeeming feature, however, is that the farmer has a fence built sveral feet from the barn which keeps the manure and other dirt at least that far away from the barns and makes a clean passageway into the building. Another farm near West Fairview has a similar fence in front of the barn and there is only a thin layer of manure in the yard. This place was one of the best visited.

Throughout next week the inspectors will continue their work in an endeavor to visit every farm in this territory.
