

Compels All Impurities To Abandon System

Blood Troubles Can not Remain If Properly Treated.

There is in S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, a property that absolutely compels harmful influences to disintegrate and lose their identity. No matter what they are called nor how destructive they are there is in S. S. S. a powerful, searching counter influence to annihilate the most eruptive germ, cause the mucous linings to convert it into an inert substance that is quickly thrown out of the blood and out of the body by the skin, lungs, kidneys, bowels, and destroyed in the liver. There is not a single advance in medicine today that in any sense is an improvement over S. S. S. Surgery is a wonderful, masterful science, but when it comes to purifying the blood S. S. S. stands alone. Thousands of doctors have prescribed it. Their patients do not always know it is S. S. S., because they leave the treatment to the doctor implicitly. But fair-minded doctors long ago realized that in the vegetable nature of S. S. S. were certain ingredients that to the blood in sickness were just as essential as the flesh-building elements of the grains, meats, fats and sugars of our daily food. The average doctor is humane and of trained intelligence. He has seen the recoveries from worst cases of blood trouble by the use of S. S. S. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist. Accept no substitute. And if you wish proper advice on any form of blood trouble, write to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 102 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is worth while doing so.

Two Fairs at Half Fare; Railroad Rates Cut In Two

The railroads have greatly reduced their fares and made it possible for you to see both the San Diego and the San Diego Expositions on one ticket. By way of the Burlington Route (C. B. & Q. R. R.) the cost of a railroad ticket to California and back will be only about one-half the usual price, and you can take in the incomparable Colorado scenery, including the Royal Gorge, see Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Salt Lake City on the way, stopping off at any point desired. Returning, you may enjoy a sea trip up the coast to Portland, see Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane, and either Clatsop National Park or Yellowstone Park—the wonders of the world. You don't take a trip like this very often. You should see the best scenery on route and not spend any more than is necessary to do it. Tell me when you plan to go, how long you can stay, and let me make up an itinerary to fit your particular needs. Let me explain how and why the Burlington can serve you best. I'll be glad to do it. Ray Norris' law office faced Willard Fall's engineering office directly across the court in the same skyscraper in New York. The two young men had become acquainted through their business proximity, invitations had been extended, calls exchanged, and the two families were in a fair way of becoming friends.

Ray Norris was a prosperous young attorney, clean cut, handsome, ambitious, and tenderly devoted to his wife. She was a good-looking young woman, of twenty-two or thereabouts, fresh as an April morning, dark-eyed, and with a bewitching, elusive smile ever lingering about the corners of her adorable red lips. If her husband was tenderly devoted to her, she was infinitely devoted to him, and set him up on a pedestal to be idolized for all time.

Mrs. Fall on the other hand was 35; engrossed in her social duties, a self-imposed social monitor and guardian of the morals of her set, who was too busy with her many tasks to grow old gracefully. Her husband, well-groomed, suave and careless, was known as a lady's man, and already disquieting rumors were reaching his wife. On the morning on which our story opens, Mrs. Fall had seen him through the window, talking to a pretty society bird, and had sent the maid to call him back. There had been a scene and he had left for his office in a huff.

II.

"Lo Miss Foster. How're you this fine morning? I hope your father is better?" It was Norris talking his stenographer.

"Good morning, Mr. Norris. He's some better, thank you." She was trying to be brave, and answered with an attempt at cheerfulness that set her head pounding violently, and made her cry at her despair for support. He had thrown off his light top coat, and without looking at her sat down, and was in a moment deep in his morning's mail. Some communication of more than ordinary importance caused him to stop in his envelop slitting, and he rose to confer with her upon its contents. Then for the first time he looked at her, and knew from her flushed cheeks and unnaturally bright eyes that something was wrong.

"Why, Miss Foster?" he exclaimed in genuine concern. "whatever's the trouble? You look like the very dickens. What's up?"

"Oh, nothing," she answered, trying to make light of his concern—leastwise nothing matters. Just a little headache. By the way, is that Smith & Hodson letter? What's the latest development this morning? What did they say about THAT for a moment. Don't please try to turn the conversation off into that channel. You're ill."

"I assure you, Mr.," He made quick gesture indicative of his intention not to be put off by his inquiry, and crossing quickly to where she stood, took both her pale, thin hands in both of his, and noted with quick concern that they were burning.

"This will never do," he said gravely, and with emphatic earnestness. And he repeated half aloud, half to himself, "never, never do. I'm afraid I've been a bit of a brute lately, what a night work, Sundays, and skipped lunch hours." He disregarded her attempt to assuage his self reproach, and went on, "But I'll see to that. You're slated for a vacation, and that in short order. I'll make arrangements." He turned thoughtfully away, and went back to his letters.

Willard Fall, across the court, in his office had seen Norris cross to where Myra stood at her desk beside the broad window, and an evil smile lighted his coarse features as he noted Norris take Myra's hands in his and hold them the while he spoke solicitously to her. Devoid of concern for the welfare of his own help, he had not the finesse to attribute another's concern to anything other than a personal motive, and he felt a miserable elation at what he considered "Norris' little game." His reflections were disturbed by the slight, recurrent creaking of his door, as of someone trying cautiously, inch by inch, to open it unnoticed. He sprang from his chair, strode with swift soft steps to the door, pulled it suddenly open, and confronted—his wife.

He bowed with mock courtesy at her startled surprise at being apprehended, and spoke with more than his usual unctious.

"So, my dear, spying on me, eh? Had I divined your coming, I might have made preparations so's not to disappoint your expectations, and lived up to my reputation as a black-guard rascal. You should have let me know, so's I could have made ready a tableaux to satisfy your insatiable desire for a scene. Fancy the notoriety, to say nothing of the aspersions. You might engage a publicity agent, pose as injured innocence, and get your picture in the Sunday magazine."

She turned, and had started to go, when his voice again arrested her. "Your idol seems to have clay feet. You indulge in the common fallacy of imagining that every man you have no intimate acquaintance with is a model of propriety. No one who is acquainted with your reputation as the watch-dog of Society—here he grinned—would ever believe you to be so frightfully unsophisticated. Why it was only a short while ago, when glancing casually out of this window holding hands with his pretty stenographer."

STATE'S TUNNELS ARE REPORTED ON

Dohoney Completes First Study of Those Operated by the Railroads of Pennsylvania

John P. Dohoney, investigator of accidents for the Public Service Commission, has prepared for the commission a statistical exhibit relating to the tunnels located on the lines of the various steam railroads within this State, as a result of last Fall's accident near Phoenixville.

The report concerns 151 tunnels aggregating thirty-one miles and shows the length, width and height of each tunnel; when constructed; character of construction; method of ventilation; number of tracks; degrees of curves and percentage of grades. There are but two tunnels in the entire number which are ventilated by fans—one is the Gallitzin tunnel on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad which is 3,612 feet in length, and the other is the tunnel at Mahanoy on the line of the Philadelphia and Reading, which is 3,406 feet in length. The longest tunnel in the State is at Greensburg on the Westinghouse Pittsburgh. It is 4,716 feet in length and has natural ventilation. Another long tunnel is the Big Savage on the Western Maryland. It is 3,296 feet in length.

Meet in Erie The Public Service Commission, which has spent the past week in Scranton, hearing complaints affecting that part of the State, will spend Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in Erie. On Tuesday morning the Commission against the Pennsylvania and the Erie Railroad Companies will be heard. The establishment of switch connections between the lines of these roads at, or near, Union City is desired. In the afternoon there will be an inspection of the grade crossings in the city of Erie, and the commission will be accompanied by city officials and others interested in the elimination of these thoroughfares. One of the crossings to be supplanted by a subway is the Parker Crossing where the Buffalo road crosses the tracks of the Lake Shore, the New York, Chicago and St. Louis and the Buffalo and Lake Erie. The commission will consider the matter of the apportionment of the cost of the construction of the subway and the damages to the adjacent property owners.

Testimony will be taken on the complaint of Frank Babbitt against the Albion Electric Light and Power Company, the Bell Telephone Company and the Albion Telephone Company. The complainant, who is a burgess of Craneyville, alleges that the respondent executed an agreement providing for the joint use of poles without the approval of the commission; and that the light company extended its lines in the territory in which they had no franchise. The answer of the respondents is that the agreement was executed on the twenty-third of December, 1913, before the Public Service Company law became effective, and therefore did not require the approval of the commission.

Here Next Week The commission will be in Harrisburg during the week of July sixth, and among the volume of business to dispose of there are forty-two hearings on municipal contracts of various kinds. Meetings will be held in Pittsburgh on July 13, 14, 15 and 16, when the complaint of the boroughs of Greensburg, Jeanette, Youngwood, Irwin and Manor against the rates and service of the Westmoreland Water Company will be considered. In connection with these hearings the attorneys interested have been notified to meet the commission at Erie on June 30 to present oral argument as to the matter of the burden of proof and as to the additional information that should be furnished the complainants.

After the Pittsburgh meeting the commission will return to Harrisburg and hold another hearing on the complaint of the Philadelphia Milk Exchange against the rates on milk assessed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. On July 27 there will be an oral argument before the commission on the matter of uniform telephone rates throughout the State. The borough of Hamburg has filed with the commission a complaint against the Hamburg Gas and Electric Company, alleging excessive rates; and Carl A. Gable, of Emporium, complains against the Pennsylvania railroad for proposal to discontinue, as a regular stop, train No. 54 leaving Emporium at 11.93 p. m.

MEDICINE HABIT IS TOO PREVALENT

Commissioner Dixon Discusses the Free and Easy Way People Trifle With Drugs

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, the State's Commissioner of Health, fires a broadside at the indiscriminate taking of medicine by people who oftentimes are led to do so by chance remarks or their own notions with regard to ultimate effects. "Many a man who would repair his piano will accept the advice of his next door neighbor regarding some 'favorite' remedy for an ailment," says the commissioner in his weekly "health talk." He will consume innumerable bottles of "medicine" which are accompanied by guarantees which no reputable physician would think of making.

The human body is so much more delicate in its construction than any mechanical device ever invented that to run the risk of upsetting the functions of the various organs by the use of preparations of which one has no accurate knowledge is not only absurd but in many instances extremely dangerous.

There is another drawback to self-medication. The diagnosis of disease is a matter which requires skill and training of the highest kind. The symptoms of various disturbances in the human economy may manifest themselves by causing distress in some part of the body entirely separated from the seat of the difficulty. As an example indigestion is often the cause of headache. Such symptoms can only be properly related to the cause by one who is skilled in diagnosis. Food itself, under certain conditions, may produce disturbances as profound as those caused by potent drugs.

The tendency of modern medicine is toward prevention and the present-day physician makes far less use of drugs than did his predecessors. Despite this fact it has been estimated that the people of the United States spend some $500,000,000 a year for medicine, most of which is not prescribed by physicians. We consume more drugs than any other people in the world. The individual who has any ailment which seems to necessitate the continued use of drugs should, for his own welfare and safety, consult an able physician.
