ADVOCATES CENTRAL FIRE CALL STATION

The development of the city's police and fire alarm telegraph system, supervision, installation of the new fire repeater, the underground wire scheme, some figures as to the number of existing poles and an illuminating paragraph or two on the volt meter service of the Harrisburg Light and Power Company help to make the report interesting.

At the present location, they should at least be protected by a lease covering a term of years. Pending the solution of the head-quarters matter as to location and the adoption of some arrangement that will assure greater permanency, it is suggested that if this problem cannot be promptly solved, the funds on hand for the proposed improvements be used for extension of the underground system in the Hill section. This particular section is suggested for the reason that the extension in that direction will be in conjunction with the Market street installation already made and will present no further complications so far as any proposed move or change in headquarters may be concerned. This would be but advancing the underground work on the hill, for which additional funds would be required later. It would result merely in anticipating by possibly some years work that would be a future necessity.

The installation of this improved arrangement will necessitate more careful attendance at the central office, and when it is placed in full operation, which need not necessarily be at once, arrangements should be provided for three desk men, one of whom should be on hand at all times. These men should be carefully selected for their intelligence, care and attention to duty, as the position will be one of more than ordinary importance.

underground wiring system for the overhead method of carrying current, but the comparatively small number of poles that still exist in Harrisburg is probably the better indication of the gradual transfer of the overhead wire to the underground conduit. Two complete inspections of poles were made during the year and these showed that throughout the length and breadth of the city there are 8,288 poles remaining. Of this number forty-four belong to the city. The remainder include the electric light, telephone, telegraph and trolley companies.
