ANOTHER GHOST LAID

ONE of the periodic scares of the financial community relates to the sale of American securities by European investors. The fear of such selling on a wholesale scale was the primary cause for the closing down of the New York Stock Exchange last summer and for the imposition of minimum prices when trading in securities was resumed.

BRYAN AND THE PRESIDENT

AT any rate, President Wilson is not in position to pass any adverse criticism upon Mr. Bryan. It was Bryan alone who took Wilson from a minority place in the Baltimore convention and won the nomination for him over Champ Clark, the majority candidate.

BOOM IN SHIPBUILDING

THE United States might as well be without gun factories or cartridge factories or powder works as without ocean shipyards in this festive year of the Lord 1915. Fifty steamships, ranging in capacity from 4,000 to 12,000 tons, have been contracted for by American shipyards for salt water service since December 1, 1914.

NOT A TRIFLING MATTER

D. ALBERT A. SNOWDEN, of the National Association of Manufacturers, has collected data showing that 22,000,000 persons depend directly for their livelihood on the manufacturing industries of the United States. This includes the 9,000,000 employes of the various establishments and the members of their families.

RUM AND WAR DO NOT MIX

SPECIAL correspondence just received in this country from Berlin indicates that rum and war do not mix well, even though there be some who doubtless believe that one is little worse than the other. At a conference of German societies established to deal with inebriates it was reported that all but a few of a large number of men treated by these organizations and sent to the front had to be dismissed from the ranks, as neither their nerves nor their physical condition enabled them to stand the strain.

up the rates of wages and the costs of materials that for the first time in sixty years the price of ships from British shipyards is virtually equal to the price in the United States.

Some foreign merchants, whose national policies have compelled them to depend upon British or German yards for ships, are now making inquiries in America. In the vivid light of this great European war the American people are being taught the impressive lesson that great and prosperous ocean shipyards are indispensable, not only to their commercial independence, but to their national security.

THE OLD-FASHIONED FOURTH

EXERCISES designed to welcome newly enfranchised citizens of foreign birth will be the feature of Fourth of July celebrations in a large number of towns throughout the country this year, but, as has been the case with many another idea that literally swept the country at its inception, it is a question if Americanization day in its present form will be adopted permanently. An annual ceremony to welcome aliens who have come to make this country their future home would commend itself to all patriotic and intelligent Americans, but there is a fundamental flaw in the proposition to have it occur on the Fourth.

was indulgence in alcohol. The more closely he approached total abstinence, especially in the period before engaging in active operations, the better soldier he became.

All this is a very new view. Every man admits down in his heart, if not openly, that alcohol is debilitating and that he who indulges in it must lack in physical fitness and, therefore, in efficiency. The remarkable thing is that the fact is admitted in Berlin, the home of efficiency and also the fountainhead of German army orders which specifically permit German soldiers to indulge in limited quantities of alcoholic beverages.

TELEGRAPH PERISCOPE

—We believe in a "safe and sane" Fourth, but we also confess to a lingering sympathy with the boy who has a hankering for freecrackers. —Do you remember how you counted the yellow and green freecrackers that were mixed with the red? The yellows, you know, were "queens," and the green ones "kings."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

—No more American fetes for Huerta," says a news dispatch. Such is fate. —"Can American officers resign?" asks Daniels. The best evidence that they can is that they do.

Politics in Pennsylvania

By the Ex-Committee

The time for candidates for county and municipal nominations to circulate petitions for nominations opened in Pennsylvania to-day and throughout the State, which is already stirred up by contests for something like thirty judicial places, papers are flying. The petitions for county and municipal nominations must be filed by August 31, while those for judicial nominations are due on August 24.

The crop of candidates for county and city nominations throughout the State will break all records, it is believed. In many counties, as in Dauphin, aspirants have been going about the months. The campaign for the primaries will run into September 21, and there will be some strenuous work done as the presidential campaign next year looms up in many districts.

President Judge Charles L. Brown, of the Philadelphia municipal court is now being boomed for mayor of Philadelphia along with Judge Gorman and Director Porter. Mr. Brown was formerly senator, Altoona district; M. C. Myton, Altoona district; J. F. Norton, Mechanicsburg district, and H. R. Skiles, Lancaster district. It is stated that the removals have been made on the score of economy, but it is generally believed among Democrats here that when the presidential campaign opens there will be some openings.

The Tennessee Congressman who telegraphed the President, "The people are with you and they never resign," takes the prize. His name is Sims—Springfield Republican.

Great Britain continues her sentimental policy of blocking shipments to Germany without killing steamship passengers. "Who are the manhood?" Philadelphia North American.

The Republic of San Marino, which recently abandoned neutrality, seems to be more successful than the other belligerents in keeping its campaign-plans and the movements of its armies secret. —New Orleans Picayune.

THE CARTOON OF THE DAY

STILL AFLOAT

THE ONE-TERM SCHISM

[From the Baltimore American].

WHETHER Woodrow Wilson will succeed himself as president of the United States is a matter of doubt. It is more than probable that a Republican will occupy the place now filled by him. But there is no doubt whatever that William Jennings Bryan will not achieve his ancient ambition to be President, nor will he have the naming of the next Democratic candidate for the presidency.

As Jackson sat upon the inaugural stand when his successor Van Buren was inducted into the presidency and remarked with low satisfaction that he had made Van Buren president, so William Jennings Bryan has acted in a manner to give the impression that Wilson was Bryan's man. It has so turned out that despite the regrettable evidences of a national decline, the President set his face as a flint in a direction antipodal to that of his Secretary of State. This in the mind of a man of the type of Mr. Bryan, constitutes a mortal offense. Hence, while the smooth palaver of high regard for the President trickles from his lips he has set about in a business-like manner appoint-ly, to kittle Mr. Wilson in case of his entertaining aspirations for a second term. The President has never publicly subscribed to the one-term idea, but has expressed himself sensibly to the effect that the head of the people is the chief servant of the people and is there to do their will as long as they care to retain him in his post. Hence the one-term schism that is already rupturing the Democratic party is not bred of brass but of iron.

BUFFALO CROSS ROADS

Buffalo Cross Roads, a village four and a half miles from Lewisburg, in Union county, was named according to historians, because the last buffalo killed in the great Buffalo valley of Union county was shot near the place. The skull of this enormous large bull, was hung on a pole at a point where public highways crossed, hence the name. This buffalo was killed, it is asserted, in the early part of 1800. This village of Buffalo Cross Roads was the home of a tanner by the name of Chamberlain, who is said to have been the first person in the United States to start the canning of fruits for commercial purposes. Mr. Chamberlain began this fruit preserving as an experiment for his own use. The products were pleasing to the taste, and he made shipments of goods to New York city, where a demand soon arose for all the surplus fruits he was able to supply.—Philadelphia Record.

Evening Chat

Harrisburg will probably be one of the first of the school districts of the State to have a continuation school under the new act providing for education of the youngsters while they are working.

The wardens selected yesterday by the State Game Commission, who will be added to the force already chosen if Governor Brumbaugh approves the names, were chosen from the largest list of applicants ever known to the commission. There is the only normal wardens authorized by the last Legislature, to be paid out of the revenue from hunters' licenses. Over 100 men from all over the State applied for the places, and this number was weeded out. Then more came in and the commissioners finally decided to seek the aid of game associations, men interested in hunting and in the sports. The result was that some excellent recommendations were secured. Then the commissioners adopted the plan of having persons make reports on the applicants. In the list of applicants were a number of men who had served in the State police and who had left the force to go to college. Several others were men with good records in the United States army, and it is expected that the force of wardens when complete will be the best the State ever had. The question of how far game wardens, who are paid out of the hunters' license fund, can be called upon to work as fish and forest wardens, is to be settled by the attorney General. The Game Commission are willing to have the men work incidentally, but refuse to assign men to other departments until they are sure they can be spared. The law, which specifically sets aside income from hunters' licenses for payment of men employed in game protection, and other work connected with the game commission.

Congressman Thomas S. Crago, of Greene county, who was here yesterday between noon and five, is a member of the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress who is an officer of the National Guard. He is lieutenant-colonel of the 15th, and takes a big interest in the work.

Public Service Commissioner W. D. B. Almy, a former congressman, is a former officer of the National Guard and still retains a great liking for it and deep interest in its work.

Among visitors to the city yesterday was General H. S. Hildner, now of Philadelphia, a veteran, who has been connected with a number of State boards and commissions. The general received word that it was just fifty-one years since he had been wounded.

The executive committee of the State Bar Association, elected at Cape May yesterday contains the names of a number of men who are very well known here. Among them are Public Service Commissioner John S. Rilling, Ex-Deputy Attorney General F. W. Flett, Judge David Brodhead, Agnew Rice, of the Geological survey; Thomas H. Greevy, John A. Nauman and John M. Phey.

While Assistant City Clerk Ross R. Seaman has established a splendid system for filing and indexing copies of city ordinances, the installation of new ordinance filing case and cabinet in City Clerk Miller's offices will add greatly to the facility of handling these matters. The cabinet of filing cases of furniture and is so arranged with shelves as to make it invaluable for filing not only ordinances but most any other city papers of the kind.

"Something wrong with the calendar this year," remarked a farmer in market this week. "I don't know what happened, but it's all mixed up. The crops are not suffering, to be sure, but we have had a number of city folks vining late in the season. According to the calendar, the usual order of the first six months."
