Motor Car Industry on a

"Conditions in the automobile busi-ess are more settled than at any revious time," says Richard E, Scott, eneral manager of the Reo Motor Car

"Conditions in the automobile business are more settled than at any previous time," says Richard E. Scott, general manager of the Reo Motor Cark Company.

"I can't recall a time when the outable of the man on the outside I suppose it looks just the reverse—what with the man on the outside I suppose it looks just the reverse—what with the many innovations, the many types of multi-cylinder cars and the other seemingly contradictory announcements, together with the apartent slashing of prices.

"But if you look below the surface you will see that these are but indications of stability — frantic breaks in prices in midseason, the adoption of new radical types of motors, etcetera, are but effarts on the part of some makers to get "a place in the sun," while those who already enjoy that privilege—the better established makers—are announcing nothing radical.

"In previous years the most disturbing elements have been aligned against each other. That servet to divide the audience to buyers and to divide finement of existing standards and ignoring the efforts of newer concerns to establish new ones — without having agreed among themselves as to what shall be the basis of that new standard.

"As a result we find, buyers, instead of being confused by the arguments of the many beligerents are, in their buying, at least, playing the part of neutrals, and giving their support to the established order of things.

"For example, we have never known the demand to be so brisk for conservative types as now, while those whose purse or preference dictates a larger car, seem perfectly satisfied with Sixes. Of course we are all watching the novelties with interest as well as curjoity, but like President Wilson, we are more anxious to keep out of the fray han to engage in it, since the chances of a glorious victory are many times discounted in our minds by the hazard of an ignominious failure."
