THOUSANDS OF HEAD OF CATTLE KILLED

Cost Will Run Over $1,350,000; 517 Slain in Dauphin County

Over 15,000 head of cattle and more than 13,000 head of swine had to be destroyed in the outbreak of foot and mouth disease which has just about come to an end in Pennsylvania and by the time the Federal and State Governments pay the bills for cattle and property taken to check the disease it is estimated that the cost will run over $1,350,000. This sum does not include the loss to farmers of cattle raisers for which they were not reimbursed.

The disease, which began in 1914, prevailed on 78 farms in 24 counties. The previous outbreak, which occurred in 1908, affected 100 farms in thirteen counties. Lancaster was the worst sufferer with Berks next.

Thus far the State Livestock Sanitary Board has disbursed about $650,000, of which $445,000 in round numbers was spent in appraisal of cattle for which the State paid one-half and the Federal Government the like sum, and $38,000 for property destroyed. The State also paid over $50,000 for disinfectants and disinfecting and disposal of cattle. The legislature appropriated $825,000 for meeting the cost of the disease, but it does not reach.
