Nestle's Food

Don't try to put your baby off with cow's milk. You can't tell whether the cow is healthy—or the dairy clean—whether the cow's milk you're getting carries sickness—even consumption. And if you can—you do not know how to modify the heavy parts of cow's milk that are intended for a calf's four stomachs.

It's all done for you in Nestlé's—the healthy inspected cows—the protection against germs—the modifying of the heavy parts—the addition of the things your baby needs and the calf doesn't.

Even the frailest baby can digest Nestle's. Cold water and one min-ute's boiling prepares it. Baby will thrive on it as the babies of three generations have done.

"You don't know anything about it, or you talk as if you hadn't any sense. Go on out to the tea. I suppose you won't be satisfied till you get there."

Helen got up at this last remark and went into her room to dress. If Warren wanted to be so unfair, there was no need of bothering any more about it. He would have his own way no matter what she said, and there was no reason why she should give up the tea, either. Half an hour later she came into the room again, ready to go out.

"Warren, dear, please tell me where bed and she bent over him anxiously."

"Warren," she said softly.

Helen did not know how to answer this argument and hesitated a moment before speaking. "But there must be something I can do, dear, before I go out."

"Go out? Where are you going now? Here it is Saturday afternoon, and you have to go out somewhere. I suppose if I had brought home tickets for the theater you would be ready and willing to stay at home and go out with me, but when I come home sick you have to go gadding all about town."

Helen got up at this last remark

She looked very sweet and adorable in her smart afternoon costume, and she was trying to make things as pleasant as possible for him.

"What would you like to eat, dear?" I don't feel hungry."

"I know, but you must try to eat something, Warren. The doctor is coming up to see how you are as soon as he returns."

"What doctor?"

"Dr. Marshall."

"That young whippersnapper! Why didn't you send for Bradley?"

"Dr. Marshall is so convenient and is just as good."

Warren did not reply and Helen went out to see about Warren's dinner. Before she was finished Nora admitted the doctor.

"I have he isn't going to have another siege with his throat, doctor," sold Helen, anxiously.

"Nothing serious at all," said the doctor after a brief examination. "He has taken cold and a good rest in bed to-morrow ought to make him pretty fit. These tablets, Mrs. Curtis, every two hours. I don't think you'll need me again."

Nora came in with a tray as Helen brought the medicine and a glass of

Need 200 More Men on Woman Falls Dead While Pipe Bending Lathes

An increase of 200 men in the number of employes of the Harrisburg Pipe and Pipe Bending Works is necessary to complete the large orders contracted for at the local plant.

The 200 men are being advertised for to operate lathes on eight hour shifts. The machines are located in the new building at Herr and Cameron streets, having a floor space of more than one acre.

This increase in the force of the company will make the total number of men employed approximately 1,000.

TAFFETA WITH ORGANDIE

New Model Giving Both the Waistcoat Suggestion and Bishop Sleeves.

By MAY MANTON

8687-A Fancy Blouse with Sash, 34 to 40 bust.

The smartness of this bodice is apparent at a glance. It includes all the very newest features—the waistcoat effect, the Bishop sleeves and the sash at the back. In the picture, the under-bodice is made from organdie and the over-blouse is of taffeta, but there are so many combinations that could be made that the list would be a very long one. Plain silk can be used in place of the figured taffeta and it can be either taffeta or faille. Cotton crèpe also can be used to give just the effect shown here and if the organdie is a bit too dainty or too perishable for the under-bodice, Georgette crêpe, washable taffeta, sheer white cotton crèpe, cotton voile, chiffon or silk voile répe, washable taffeta, sheer white cotton cracker ought to make him pretty fit. Nora came in with a tray as Helen brought the medicine and a glass of water to the bedside. "Put it here, Nora; that's right. Now, Warren, see if you can't eat something.

Warren attacked the dainty meal with his usual appetite and took his medicine obediently. Helen flushed faintly as his hand closed on hers over the glass. After all, every woman likes to baby her husband once in a while.

After the first trial, the old-fashioned cook slowly but surely comes to use Crisco for all cooking. She has become a Crisco enthusiast. She has found these advantages:

Frying. There is no smoke nor odor. Fried foods are free from the taste of grease. Now they are tasty and crisp and digestible. The same Crisco can be used to fry fish, onions, doughnuts, etc., merely by straining out the food particles after each frying.

Shortening. Crisco gives pastry a new flakiness and digestibility.

Cake Making. Crisco gives richness at smaller cost. It brings cake making back to popularity.
