Religion in Sweaters at the Great College Conferences

Meetings Flavored With College Slang Register Life-Work Decisions; a Clinic in Internationalism

THE average American is not in the way of knowing one of the most significant forces at work for the shaping of the nation's religious leadership—the college Young Men's Christian Association, especially as represented in the summer camp and conferences. There have been held this summer, in every section of America, great meetings of the students of the land, practically every college and university being represented by delegates chosen by the students themselves.

What to do as a life work is the student's burning question, and these conferences are avowedly a time of decision. The aim is to provide expert advice for the men, regardless of what their choice of calling. Naturally, with the religious sentiment stimulated as it is, there are many recruits made at these conferences for the ministry, the mission field, association work and social service.

NEW INSURANCE IS NOW ORGANIZED

Investment of the money transferred from the State Sinking Fund to the State's new Fire Insurance Fund will be started by the custodian of the fund, State Treasurer Robert K. Young, in a short time. This fund, which was established by an act of the recent legislature, received $175,000 from the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday, this sum being the excess of cash over outstanding debt, and there was also turned over to it $2,000 as the proceeds of a fire insurance policy on a State building burned and $13 from a returned premium on a State automobile insurance policy.

FIRE COMPANIES OF CITY ARE IN DEBT

Presidents of each of the local fire companies, with Fire Chief John C. Kinder and assistant, Edward Halbert, will urge an increase in appropriations for the fire department.

Will Ask Council to Increase Running Expense Appropriations

These officers and city chiefs comprise a committee named by the Firemen's Union last night to present to Council at an early date a request for more money.

Chiefly, though, the presence of the foreign students lends the color of worldism to the conferences. Chinese, Japanese, Indian and Latin-American students fraternize on friendly terms with the other college men. Since the foreigners, being students, are already accustomed to college slang and college ways the following is easy and natural. This familiarity, and the messages of the Christian non-Americans, powerfully stimulate the cosmopolitan spirit, to the great advantage of foreign missions. The delegates, no matter how provincial when they arrive, acquire the world view.

These summer conferences are really the culmination and climax of the year's work of the Young Men's Christian Association and the denominations among college students. There are 750 student Y. M. C. A.'s in North America, with 75,000 members, and 188 secretaries, together with thirty "student pastors." Many of the leading men in college are association leaders, and sweaters bearing the letters which signify athletic achievement are common at the conferences. One husky football captain, who had also been a baseball and basketball fiend, said at a testimony meeting, "Fellows, I've already dirtied three uniforms; now I'm going back to dirty a fourth uniform for Christ." Which was his way of saying that he was going to get into the game of religion up to the limit. That typifies the outcome of these conferences in the case of most of the students.
