FOR LITTLE BOYS

A New Suit with Middy Blouse that can be Worn with or without the Belt.

Boy's Suit, with or without Belt,

Straight trousers are the accepted ones this season for the little boys. and here is a suit combining them with a Middy blouse. It can be left loose and made with open neck and short sleeves to be really ideal for mid-summer wear and it also can be made with high neck, long sleeves and with the belt to be better adapted to the slightly cooler days or perhaps to the boys who have reached the mature age of six years, from two to four years, the loose blouse is apt to be the more becoming. The pocket that is inserted in the left side is sure to make an appeal to the little wearer and the middy rlosing makes an attractive featurer; altogether the costume is one of the best of the season. Either white galacte or white linen trimmed with blue or with rose color would give the effect illustrated, but these suits are made from gingham, chambray and from various other washable materials. For very hard usage, thaki colored chambray is liked and often there is a touch of bright colored trimming used to make it more child-like in effect. The trousers are finished with a waist-band that can be buttoned to any under-waist and the blouse is drawn on over the lead.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

When my baby was five months old her face got all red and it looked puffed up. In a couple of weeks the little face was so sore, and it had a crust on the left cheek one-half an inch thick. It seemed to itch as she was trying to scratch it all the time. She used to be very cross and restless, and I never thought she would get and restless, and I never thought she would get well.

well.

"I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment
ivertised and I sent for a free sample, bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and some Ointment and after using them for a week she is healed." (Signed) Mrs. Elisabeth Goetter, Wynecote, Pa., Jan. 30, 1915.

Sid Dodge's place was running full Courteous, obsequious waiters slid soft-footed from table to kitchen and back again, bearing in their miraculous arms dishes adroitly chefed for the dissipated palates of epicureans-drinks cunningly mixed by the highest priced experts in the No expense was spared at Sid Dodge's place-the stakes were too big to skimp on the details that made for tone.

The room was filled with the strange murmur of many voices, high, low, soft, musical, harsh, droning—ell contributing to an incessant mingconcealing effectively the fact that he was keenly alive to every move in the room.

The music again started, this time in a brisk, accentuated Tarantelle; there was a flash of red from behind the palms, a clicking of castanets, and out on the raised dais flashed a slim wisp of a girl, and flung herself with abandon into the spirited dance of Spain. In a moment the busy hum of voices died to a few occasional whispered communications and everyone stared in gladly given attention at the girl on the platform.

She was dark-eyed, fair-skinned, her cheeks rouged and lips carmined alluringly, her light responsive body swaying low and straightening snappily in perfect time to the exacting beat of the music. Raised gracefully above her head, side-tilted, her fair round arms bent at the wrist, her hands resolving themselves into the hollow clucking castanets. Her face wore a rapt, set smile as of perpetual pleasure, her every motion betraying how well she loved this rhythmic expression—her expression of the Beautiful. The music ceased suddenly, bravely, in a spirited crash mixed with the smart double-stamp of the dancer's heels on the floor, and the thrilling cluck of the castanets—there was again that subdued applause—again the resumption of conversation, and the dancer, panting and flushed again the resumption of conv again the resumption of conversation, and the dancer, panting and flushed beneath her rouge, came down from the dais, and courtesying familiarly, threaded her way between the tables. She stopped at one with a word of familiar greeting on her lips and sat down.

familiar greeting on her lips and sat down.

The young man in the corner watched her and her companion as the gliding watter carefully wiped the bottoms of their liquer glasses and set them down. The girl seemed laughningly to propose a toast that met with the approval of her friend, who laughed heartily—their glasses clinked and were empited quickly, the watchful waiter acknowledging by a courteous inclination of his head their reorder. The man she was seated with was a flabby, pink faced, tiny-eyed individual, his light brown hair combed smoothly back over his head and accentuating a lack of forehead that he had done better to have left covered. His fingers tapped nervously the white table cloth as fin time to some rhythm subconsciously dominating them, the while his eyes narrowed doubtfully, as though reluctant to be persuaded by the girl's apparent proposal. The second drink was brought, disposed of in as short order as the first, and the girl again seemed trying to persuade the tiny-eyed man across the table. His wavering was gradually lessened as she coaxed, and he at length got up and followed her to the wall, alongside that noiseless door. Her fingers seemed fussing with something on the wainscoting, when suddenly the wall slid back as though m a track.

G. PINCHOT LOSES HIS VEST

Watch, Chain and Money Go Too During Stroll in Washington

Special to The Telegraph
Washington, July 19.—Gifford Pinchot, Progressive candidate for United States Senator from Pennsylvania last year, according to a statement made to the police, lost his waistcoat, containing a watch and some money, while walking "from his residence in Rhode Island avenue to the Cosmos Club."

The garment was a heavy gray one. It proved to be too warm for the conservationist as he got up his stride, so he removed it and his coat and carried them under his arm. The waistcoat probably silpped away.

Mr. Pinchot has offered a reward. The watch and chain were heirlooms.

CHILD CAUGHT BY REAPER

Special to The Telegraph
Marietta, Pa., July 19.—Paul Shumaker, aged 3 years, son of Amos Shumaker, of Conoy township, is in a critical condition, from being caught in the knives of a reaping machine Saturday. The child was playing in the yard and wandered into the tall wheat, unknown to the father, who was driving the reaper. The child's legs were almost severed, and he was otherwise injured.
